NEW QUESTION # 124

Which CLI command converts a Splunk instance to a license slave?

- A. splunk list licenser-localslave
- B. splunk edit licenser-localslave
- C. splunk list licenser-slaves
- D. splunk add licenses

Answer: B

Explanation:

The `splunk edit licenser-localslave` command is used to convert a Splunk instance to a license slave. This command will configure the Splunk instance to contact a license master and receive a license from it. This command should be used when the Splunk instance is part of a distributed deployment and needs to share a license pool with other instances. The `splunk add licenses` command is used to add a license to a Splunk instance, not to convert it to a license slave. The `splunk list licenser-slaves` command is used to list the license slaves that are connected to a license master, not to convert a Splunk instance to a license slave. The `splunk list licenser-localslave` command is used to list the license master that a license slave is connected to, not to convert a Splunk instance to a license slave. For more information, see Configure license slaves in the Splunk documentation.
