ISACA Certified Information Security Manager Sample Questions (Q113-Q118):

NEW QUESTION # 113

Which of the following would be MOST helpful when determining appropriate access controls for an application?

- A. Industry best practices

- B. Gap analysis results
- C. Data criticality
- D. End-user input

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 114

Which of the following is the BEST resource for evaluating the strengths and weaknesses of an incident response plan?

- A. Incident response maturity assessment
- B. Recovery time objectives (RTOs)
- C. Mission, goals and objectives
- D. Documentation from preparedness tests

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 115

When an organization hires a new information security manager, which of the following goals should this individual pursue FIRST?

- A. Establish good communication with steering committee members
- B. Assemble an experienced staff
- C. Develop a security architecture
- D. Benchmark peer organizations

Answer: A

Explanation:

New information security managers should seek to build rapport and establish lines of communication with senior management to enlist their support. Benchmarking peer organizations is beneficial to better understand industry best practices, but it is secondary to obtaining senior management support. Similarly, developing a security architecture and assembling an experienced staff are objectives that can be obtained later.

NEW QUESTION # 116

What should be the NEXT course of action when an information security manager has identified a department that is repeatedly not following the security policy?

- A. Introduce additional controls to force compliance with policy.
- B. Report the policy violation to senior management.
- C. Require department users to repeat security awareness training.
- D. Perform a vulnerability assessment on the systems within the department.

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 117

Management has announced the acquisition of a new company. The information security manager of the parent company is concerned that conflicting access rights may cause critical information to be exposed during the integration of the two companies. To BEST address this concern, the information security manager should:

- A. perform a risk assessment of the access rights.
- B. implement consistent access control standards.
- C. escalate concerns for conflicting access rights to management.
- D. review access rights as the acquisition integration occurs.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Performing a risk assessment of the access rights is the best way to address the concern of conflicting access rights during the integration of two companies. A risk assessment will help to identify and prioritize the threats and vulnerabilities that affect the access rights of both companies, as well as the potential impact and likelihood of information exposure. A risk assessment will also provide a basis for selecting and evaluating the controls to mitigate the risks. According to NIST, a risk assessment is an essential component of risk management and should be performed before implementing any security controls¹. The other options are not the best ways to address the concern of conflicting access rights during the integration of two companies, but rather possible subsequent actions based on the risk assessment. Reviewing access rights as the acquisition integration occurs may be too late or too slow to prevent information exposure. Escalating concerns for conflicting access rights to management may not be effective without evidence or recommendations from a risk assessment. Implementing consistent access control standards may not be feasible or desirable for different systems or business units.
