NEW QUESTION # 20

An existing Objects bucket was created for backups with these parameters:
A) WORM policy of three years
B) Versioning policy of two years
C) Lifecycle policy of two years
The customer reports that the cluster is nearly full due to backups created during a recent crypto locker attack. The customer would like to automatically delete backups older than one year to free up space in the cluster.
How should the administrator change settings within Objects?

- A. Create a new' bucket with the WORM policy of two years.
- B. Modify the existing bucket lifecycle policy from two years to one year.
- C. Create a new' bucket with the lifecycle policy of one year.
- D. Modify the existing bucket WORM policy from three years to one year.

Answer: B

Explanation:
According to Nutanix documentation on unified storage (NCP-US) v6, to automatically delete backups older than one year, an administrator should modify the existing bucket lifecycle policy to set the expiration period to one year. Lifecycle policies enable administrators to automate the transition of objects to different storage classes and to expire them altogether. In this scenario, modifying the existing bucket lifecycle policy to shorten the expiration period to one year will ensure that backups older than one year are automatically deleted to free up space in the cluster.
