NEW QUESTION # 280

A customer wants to make a full copy replica of a database to use for performance testing. Which technology should they use to create the copy?

- A. deduplication
- B. synthetic full
- C. snapshot
- D. clone

Answer: D

Explanation:

When a customer needs to create a full copy replica of a database for performance testing, the best technology to use is a clone. A clone creates an exact, independent copy of a volume, which can be used separately from the original. This is particularly useful for scenarios such as testing, development, or backup, where an exact copy of the data is required without affecting the production environment.
