- B. A zero-based budget is prepared each year and requires each item of expenditure to be justified.

NEW QUESTION # 121

Which of the following techniques would best detect an inventory fraud scheme?

- A. Analyze stratification of inventory adjustments by warehouse location.
- B. Analyze differences discovered during duplicate payment testing.
- C. Analyze invoice payments just under individual authorization limits.
- D. Analyze Inventory Invoice amounts and compare with approved contract amounts.

Answer: A

Explanation:

* Understanding Inventory Fraud Detection:

* Inventory fraud typically involves overstatement or understatement of inventory, fictitious inventory transactions, or misappropriation of stock.

* A key way to detect fraud is analyzing inventory adjustments (e.g., write-offs, missing stock, excess inventory) to identify unusual patterns or discrepancies.

* Why Stratifying Inventory Adjustments by Warehouse is the Best Approach:

* Identifies high-risk locations: Certain warehouses may show significantly higher inventory losses or adjustments, indicating possible fraud.

* Detects manipulation: Fraudsters may manipulate inventory records to cover theft or misstatements.

* Supports data-driven audit procedures: Stratification allows internal auditors to prioritize high-risk areas for deeper investigation.

* Why Other Options Are Incorrect:

* A. Analyze invoice payments just under individual authorization limits - Incorrect, as this technique detects fraudulent disbursements, not inventory fraud.

* C. Analyze inventory invoice amounts and compare with approved contract amounts - Incorrect, as this method detects pricing or procurement fraud, not inventory manipulation.

* D. Analyze differences discovered during duplicate payment testing - Incorrect, as this technique is used to detect billing fraud, not inventory fraud.

* IIA's Perspective on Fraud Detection and Internal Controls:

* IIA Standard 2120 - Risk Management requires internal auditors to assess fraud risk, including inventory manipulation.

* IIA GTAG (Global Technology Audit Guide) on Fraud Detection recommends data analytics for inventory monitoring.

* COSO Internal Control Framework highlights inventory control as a key component of financial accuracy and fraud prevention.

IIA References:

* IIA Standard 2120 - Risk Management & Fraud Detection

* IIA GTAG - Data Analytics for Fraud Detection in Inventory

* COSO Internal Control Framework - Inventory and Asset Management Controls Thus, the correct and verified answer is B.

NEW QUESTION # 122

When using PERT (Program Evaluation Review Technique), the expected time for an activity when given an optimistic time (a), a pessimistic time (b), and a most likely time (m) is calculated by which one of the following formulas?

- A. $(a+4m+b) / 6$
- B. $(4abm) / 6$
- C. $(a + b) + 2$
- D. $(b-a) + 2$

Answer: A

Explanation:

PERT was developed to aid managers in controlling large, complex projects. PERT analysis includes probabilistic estimates of activity completion times. Three time estimates are made Optimistic, most likely, and pessimistic. The time estimates for an activity are assumed to approximate a beta probability distribution. PERT approximates the mean of the beta distribution by dividing the sum of the optimistic time, the pessimistic time, and four times the most likely time by six.

NEW QUESTION # 123

The channel structure in which producers, wholesalers, and retailers act as a unified system is a:

- A. Multichannel system.
- B. Unilateral distribution system.
- C. Horizontal distribution system.
- D. Vertical distribution system.

Answer: D

Explanation:

In vertical distribution systems, producers, wholesalers, and retailers act as a unified system. Channel conflict is managed through common ownership, contractual relationships, or administration by one or a few dominant channel members. Horizontal distribution systems consist of two or more companies at one level of the channel working together to exploit new opportunities, such as the introduction of ATMs in supermarkets. The joint nature of horizontal distribution efforts is the tool for managing channel conflict. In a multichannel system, a single firm sets up two or more channels to reach one or more customer segments. Because such a system is managed by a single firm, channel conflicts can be evaluated and managed internally.
