Which action would site-level network administrators be able to perform?

- A. modify an RF template
- B. assign access points to the site

- C. reboot an access point
- D. create a config template

Answer: C

Explanation:

In Juniper Mist role-based access control (RBAC), site-level administrators have limited privileges to manage devices within their assigned sites.

They cannot modify organization-level templates or global settings but can perform operational tasks, including rebooting APs or switches and monitoring their status.

This ensures proper delegation of duties while maintaining centralized configuration control.
