NEW QUESTION # 99

There are 4 sections that sit under the principles of the UN Global Compact. Correctly select the 4 from the list below.

- A. Human Rights
- B. Residential
- C. Commercial
- D. Labour
- E. Anti-corruption
- F. The Environment

Answer: A,D,E,F

Explanation:

The UN Global Compact's 10 principles are grouped into four sections:

1. Human Rights (Principles 1-2): Businesses should support and respect human rights and avoid complicity in abuses.
2. Labour (Principles 3-6): Uphold freedom of association, eliminate forced/child labour, and promote non-discrimination.
3. The Environment (Principles 7-9): Support environmental responsibility, encourage sustainable technologies, and undertake initiatives to promote greater environmental care.
4. Anti-corruption (Principle 10): Work against corruption in all its forms.

'Commercial' and 'Residential' are not part of the framework, as it focuses on ethical and sustainable practices rather than operational sectors. This is detailed in the CIPS L3M6 study material.

NEW QUESTION # 100

Organizations that wish to establish a CSR strategy can look for guidance from organizations that have already been successful in their initiatives.

- A. TRUE
- B. FALSE

Answer: A

Explanation:

Organizations developing a CSR strategy can benefit from benchmarking against those with proven success in CSR initiatives. This involves learning from best practices, frameworks, and case studies of organizations that have effectively integrated social, environmental, and economic goals. The CIPS L3M6 module encourages this approach, noting that collaboration and knowledge-sharing with successful entities (e.g., signatories to the UN Global Compact or CDP leaders) can accelerate CSR adoption and improve outcomes.

NEW QUESTION # 101

Consumers are keen to support businesses that have clear environmental protection policies in place and those that declare their goals publicly.

- A. TRUE
- B. FALSE

Answer: A

Explanation:

Consumer behavior has shifted significantly toward favoring businesses with transparent environmental protection policies. Studies referenced in the CIPS L3M6 module indicate that modern consumers, particularly younger generations (e.g., 68% under 40 as per LO1), prefer companies that publicly declare sustainability goals, such as reducing carbon footprints or using eco-friendly materials. This trend drives demand for green procurement and influences supply chain strategies, as businesses seek to enhance their reputation and market share. Public declarations-via reports, certifications, or CDP disclosures-build trust and demonstrate accountability, aligning with CSR principles. For example, a company committing to net-zero emissions by 2050 and showcasing this goal can attract environmentally conscious consumers, making this statement true within the context of LO2's focus on environmental impact.

NEW QUESTION # 102

The World Health Organization found that people who have a bad view out of their window are _____% more likely to develop depression.

- A. 40%
- B. 20%
- C. 30%
- D. 10%

Answer: A

Explanation:

The WHO links poor visual environments (e.g., industrial views) to a 40% increased depression risk, per CIPS L3M6 module data. This ties to LO2's visual pollution focus-e.g., a warehouse blocking greenery affects mental health, reinforcing the need for sustainable site planning.

NEW QUESTION # 103

Land take can have knock-on effects, e.g., supply chains may build up in the location, which creates more employment opportunities, which brings more people to the area, which can then lead to housing and schools being built.

- A. TRUE

- Answer: A

Land take triggers cascading effects: new factories attract supply chains, jobs draw residents, and population growth spurs infrastructure (housing, schools). The CIPS L3M6 module notes this in LO2 as an environmental and social impact, often increasing emissions but also economic activity—a true statement.
