Fortinet FCP - FortiWeb 7.4 Administrator Sample Questions (Q49-Q54):

NEW QUESTION # 49

In SAML deployments, which server contains user authentication credentials (username/password)?

- A. Authentication client
- B. User database
- C. Identity provider
- D. Service provider

Answer: C

Explanation:

In SAML (Security Assertion Markup Language) deployments, the Identity Provider (IdP) is responsible for storing and managing user authentication credentials, such as usernames and passwords. The IdP authenticates the user and then issues a SAML assertion to the Service Provider (SP), which allows the user to access services without needing to re-enter credentials.

NEW QUESTION # 50

What are two possible impacts of a DoS attack on your web server? (Choose two.)

- A. The web application starts accepting unencrypted traffic.
- B. The web application server database is compromised with data theft.
- C. The web application is unable to accept any more connections because of network socket exhaustion.
- D. The web application server is unable to accept new client sessions due to memory exhaustion.

Answer: C,D

Explanation:

The web application is unable to accept any more connections because of network socket exhaustion: A Denial of Service (DoS) attack often floods the web server with an overwhelming number of requests, leading to network socket exhaustion. This can prevent the server from accepting new legitimate connections, effectively disrupting service.

The web application server is unable to accept new client sessions due to memory exhaustion: DoS attacks can consume a significant amount of server memory, causing memory exhaustion. This results in the web application being unable to accept new client sessions or handle requests properly.

NEW QUESTION # 51

In order for FortiWeb to provide the best possible protection for servers, how should you deploy it?

- A. In-line, behind FortiGate, deployed in reverse proxy mode.
- B. In-line, without FortiGate, deployed in true transparent mode.
- C. In-line, in front of FortiGate, deployed in offline protection mode.
- D. In a one-arm topology, deployed in transparent mode.

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 52

How are bot machine learning (ML) models different from API or anomaly detection models?

- A. Bot ML models analyze multiple connections overtime instead analyzing each connection as a single unit.
- B. Bot ML models inspect more types of connection properties.
- C. Bot ML models do not update models periodically from new data.
- D. Bot ML models detect only anomalies and not actual threats.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Bot ML models analyze multiple connections over time instead of analyzing each connection as a single unit: This is the key distinction. Bot ML models focus on analyzing patterns over a period of time, looking at behavioral patterns across multiple requests or connections from the same source to identify potential bot activity. Unlike traditional anomaly detection or API models that may focus on single connections or individual transactions, bot detection typically examines aggregated behavior to identify patterns indicative of bots, such as high-frequency requests or unusual traffic flows.
