NEW QUESTION # 110

Which of the following features is the special requirement for smart grid?

- A. PCM
- B. ROADM
- C. Transponder
- D. SAN Service

Answer: A

Explanation:

The correct answer is PCM (Pulse Code Modulation). PCM is a critical feature for smart grids because it enables the integration of legacy analog and digital services, which are still widely used in grid communications.

Here's why PCM is essential for smart grids:

- * Legacy Support: Many grid systems rely on analog signaling for SCADA, protection relays, and voice communication. PCM boards convert these analog signals into digital format for transmission over modern networks.
- * Reliability: PCM ensures high-quality, lossless transmission of critical data, such as fault detection and control commands.
- * Scalability: PCM solutions can be integrated into larger optical transport platforms, such as OTN or SDH, to support growing grid requirements.

Other options:

- * Transponder: Used for wavelength conversion in optical networks but does not address the specific needs of smart grids.
- * SAN Service: Refers to Storage Area Networks, which are unrelated to grid communications.
- * ROADM (Reconfigurable Optical Add-Drop Multiplexer): Used for dynamic wavelength routing in optical networks but does not directly support grid-specific requirements.

The statement is True. The OptiXtrans E9600 series includes multiple models, such as the E9624, E9612, and E9605, each designed for specific use cases in optical transmission networks.

Here's an overview of the models:

* OptiXtrans E9624: A high-capacity device used in backbone and core networks, supporting large-scale traffic aggregation and long-distance transmission.

* OptiXtrans E9612: A mid-range device suitable for metro and regional networks, balancing capacity and cost-effectiveness.
