CompTIA Server+ Certification Exam Sample Questions (Q416-Q421):

NEW QUESTION # 416

A technician noted the RAID hard drives were functional while troubleshooting a motherboard failure. The technician installed a spare motherboard with similar specifications and used the original components. Which of the following should the technician do to restore operations with minimal downtime?

- A. Configure old drives to RAID.
- B. Reconfigure the RAID.
- C. Reinstall the OS and programs.
- D. Install from backup.

Answer: B

Explanation:

RAID (Redundant Array of Independent Disks) is a technology that combines multiple hard drives into a logical unit that provides improved performance, reliability, or capacity. RAID can be implemented by hardware, software, or a combination of both. Hardware RAID uses a dedicated controller to manage the RAID array, while software RAID uses the operating system or a driver to do the same.

In this scenario, the technician noted that the RAID hard drives were functional while troubleshooting a motherboard failure. This means that the data on the drives was not corrupted or lost. However, the technician installed a spare motherboard with similar specifications and used the original components. This means that the new motherboard may not have the same RAID configuration as the old one, or it may not recognize the existing RAID array at all. Therefore, the technician needs to reconfigure the RAID in order to restore operations with minimal downtime.

NEW QUESTION # 419

A server administrator receives the following output when trying to ping a local host:

ping imhrh-vc.net
Reply from imhrh-vc.net: Destination host unreachable.
Reply from imhrh-vc.net: Destination host unreachable.
Reply from imhrh-vc.net: Destination host unreachable.
Reply from imhrh-vc.net: Destination host unreachable.

Which of the following is MOST likely the issue?

- A. DHCP
- B. Firewall
- C. VLAN

- D. DNS

Answer: B

Explanation:

A firewall is a network device or software that filters and controls the incoming and outgoing traffic based on predefined rules. A firewall can block or allow certain types of packets, ports, protocols, or IP addresses. The output of the ping command shows that the local host is unreachable, which means that there is no network connectivity between the source and the destination. This could be caused by a firewall that is blocking the ICMP (Internet Control Message Protocol) packets that ping uses to test the connectivity. NEW QUESTION # 420

A system administrator has been alerted to a zero-day vulnerability that is impacting a service enabled on a server OS. Which of the following would work BEST to limit an attacker from exploiting this vulnerability?

- A. Enabling antivirus protection
- B. Enabling a NIDS
- C. Closing open ports
- D. Installing the latest patches

Answer: D

Explanation:

The best way to limit an attacker from exploiting a zero-day vulnerability that is impacting a service enabled on a server OS is to install the latest patches. Patches are updates that fix bugs, improve security, or add features to software. Installing patches can help prevent attackers from exploiting known vulnerabilities that have been fixed by the software vendor. A zero-day vulnerability is a vulnerability that is unknown to the vendor or the public until it is exploited by an attacker. Therefore, installing patches as soon as they are available can reduce the window of opportunity for attackers to exploit zero-day vulnerabilities.
