Splunk Core Certified Power User Exam Sample Questions (Q64-Q69):

NEW QUESTION # 64

What are the names of the top-level datasets in data models?

- A. Core datasets
- B. Core indexes
- C. Root indexes
- D. Root datasets

Answer: D

Explanation:

Data models are hierarchical structures where the topmost datasets are known as root datasets.

Extract: "Each data model consists of one or more datasets. The top-level dataset in a hierarchy is called a root dataset." Child datasets inherit field and constraint definitions from their root dataset.

NEW QUESTION # 65

How many ways are there to access the Field Extractor Utility?

- A. 0
- B. 1
- C. 2
- D. 3

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 66

When performing a regular expression (regex) field extraction using the Field Extractor (FX), what happens when the require option is used?

- A. The events without the required field will not display in searches.
- B. Only events with the required string will be included in the extraction.
- C. The field being extracted will be required for all future events.
- D. The regex can no longer be edited.

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 67

When creating a data model, which root dataset requires at least one constraint?

- A. Root event dataset
- B. Root child dataset
- C. Root transaction dataset
- D. Root search dataset

Answer: A

Explanation:

The correct answer is B. Root event dataset. This is because root event datasets are defined by a constraint that filters out events that are not relevant to the dataset. A constraint for a root event dataset is a simple search that returns a fairly wide range of data, such as `sourcetype=access_combined`. Without a constraint, a root event dataset would include all the events in the index, which is not useful for data modeling. You can learn more about how to design data models and add root event datasets from the Splunk documentation¹. The other options are incorrect because root transaction datasets and root search datasets have different ways of defining their datasets, such as transaction definitions or complex searches, and root child datasets are not a valid type of root dataset.

NEW QUESTION # 68

Which of the following definitions describes a macro named "samplemacro" that accepts two arguments?

- A. `u amp -CJEUCXG (2)`
- B. `samplemacro(1,2)`
- C. `samplemacro[2]`
- D. `Exsamplemacro [1,2]`

Answer: B

Explanation:

In Splunk, a macro can accept arguments, and the correct syntax for a macro that takes two arguments is `macro_name(argument1, argument2)`. In this case, the macro is called `samplemacro`, and it accepts two arguments, so the correct format would be `samplemacro(1,2)`. This syntax allows for passing dynamic values into the macro, which can then be used to modify the search dynamically based on the arguments provided.
