Adobe Commerce Developer Professional Sample Questions (Q102-Q107):

NEW QUESTION # 102

An Adobe Commerce developer is working on a Magento 2 instance which contains a B2C and a B2B website, each of which contains 3 different store views for English, Welsh, and French language users. The developer is tasked with adding a link between the B2C and B2B websites using a generic link template which is used throughout the sites, but wants these links to display in English regardless of the store view.

The developer creates a custom block for use with this template, before rendering sets the translate locale and begins environment emulation using the following code:

/ @var $this->_translate \Magento\Framework\TranslateInterface */
$this->_translate->setLocale($newLocaleCode);

/ @var $this->_emulation \Magento\Store\Model\App\Emulation */
$this->_emulation->startEnvironmentEmulation($storeId, \Magento\Framework\App\Area::AREA_FRONTEND);

They find that the template text is still being translated into each stores language. Why does this occur?

- A. setLocate() does not change translation locale after it has been initially set, the $this->_translate->emulate($newLocaleCode) method exists to temporarily modify this by pushing the new locale to the top of the current emulatedLocales stack.

- B. `startEnvironmentEmulation()` Sets and locks the locale by Using the `setLocale()` Optional Second `$lock` parameter, i.e. `setLocale($newLocaleCode, true)`, to override and lock the locale of the emulated store. If this is set and locked initially then the environment emulation will not be able to override this.
- C. `startEnvironmentEmulation()` resets the translation locale to the one of the emulated stores, which overrides the locale the developer has set when the order of `setLocale` and `startEnvironmentEmulation` is used as displayed above.

Answer: C

Explanation:

The `startEnvironmentEmulation()` method resets the translation locale to the one of the emulated stores, which overrides the locale the developer has set when the order of `setLocale()` and `startEnvironmentEmulation()` is used as displayed above.

The correct way to achieve the desired result is to use the `emulate()` method to temporarily modify the translation locale. The following code shows how to do this:

PHP

$this->_translate->emulate('en_US');

// Render the template

$this->_translate->revert();

This code will set the translation locale to English before rendering the template, and then revert the locale back to the default value after the template has been rendered.

The `startEnvironmentEmulation()` method is used to emulate a different store view or website. This can be useful for testing purposes, or for developing features that need to work in different environments.

The `emulate()` method is used to temporarily modify the translation locale. This can be useful for rendering templates in a specific language, or for testing features that need to work in different languages.

NEW QUESTION # 103

A developer needs to initialize the jQuery UI widget for a specific HTML tag. Which HTML attribute is used for this?

- A. `data-ui`
- B. `data-mage-init`
- C. `x-magento-init`

Answer: B

Explanation:

The `data-mage-init` HTML attribute is used to initialize the jQuery UI widget for a specific HTML tag. This attribute specifies the name of the widget and its configuration options as a JSON object.

The `x-magento-init` HTML attribute is used to initialize RequireJS modules for a specific HTML tag. The `data-ui` HTML attribute does not exist in Adobe Commerce.

Verified References: [Adobe Commerce Developer Guide - Initialize JavaScript components using the `data-mage-init` attribute] To initialize the jQuery UI widget in Adobe Commerce, the `data-mage-init` attribute is used in the HTML tag.

This attribute allows specifying the widget's component and its configuration in a JSON format. The `x-magento-init` is used for initializing JavaScript components in a similar manner but is typically used within `<script>` tags. There's no standard `data-ui` attribute used for this purpose in Magento 2.

NEW QUESTION # 104

Which two attribute input types does Magento already have by default? (Choose two.)

- A. Multiple Select
- B. Text Field
- C. Numeric Field
- D. Geographic coordinate

Answer: A,B

Explanation:

The two attribute input types that Adobe Commerce already has by default are Multiple Select and Text Field.

Multiple Select allows the user to select multiple values from a list of options. Text Field allows the user to enter text in a single line.

The Geographic coordinate and Numeric Field input types do not exist in Adobe Commerce.

Verified References: [Adobe Commerce User Guide - Create a product attribute] Magento, by default, provides various attribute input types to accommodate different data entry needs for product and customer attributes. The "Text Field" input type allows for single-line text input, suitable for short, textual data such as names, titles, or any other brief information. The "Multiple Select" input type enables the selection of multiple options from a predefined list, useful for attributes with multiple applicable values like colors, sizes, or features. These input types are part of Magento's flexible attribute system, allowing for customizable data entry fields that cater to diverse product and customer data requirements.

NEW QUESTION # 105

A developer has informed the Adobe Support team about a planned traffic surge on an Adobe Commerce Cloud project that will take place in a little over 48 hours.

What is an advantage of this prior notice?

- A. The project will temporarily use an upgraded Fastly plan
- B. The Support team will monitor the website during that time
- C. When the traffic arrives, extra server resources will be available.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Informing the Adobe Support team about a planned traffic surge allows them to monitor the website during that time. With prior notice, the support team can ensure that they are prepared to quickly respond to any issues that arise due to the surge. While extra server resources or an upgraded Fastly plan may be possible outcomes, the primary advantage of advance notice is proactive monitoring and support during expected high traffic events.

NEW QUESTION # 106

An Adobe Commerce developer adds a new extension attribute to add an array of values to the invoices that are fetched through the APIs.

After a while, their technical manager reviews their work and notices something wrong with the `extension_attributes.xml` file that the developer created in their module:

What is the problem with this xml snippet?

- A. The extension attribute references the wrong interface, it should have referenced the `Magento\saies\Api\data\invoiceinterface`.
- B. The extension attribute references the repository instead of the interface it implements (`Magento\saies\Api\invoiceRepositoryInterface`).
- C. The type is wrong, `string []` should be replaced with `array`.

Answer: A

Explanation:

When adding extension attributes in Adobe Commerce, it's essential to reference the correct interface in the `extension_attributes.xml` file. Extension attributes in Magento are used to add custom data fields to existing entities, and these should extend the core entity interfaces, not their repositories.

In this case:

* The developer needs to reference `Magento\Sales\Api\Data\InvoiceInterface`, which represents the data structure of invoices, rather than any repository or incorrect interfaces.

* The `extension_attributes.xml` should specify the data interface (e.g., `Magento\Sales\Api\Data\InvoiceInterface`) to ensure the extension attribute is correctly applied to the invoice entity and is accessible when fetching invoices through APIs.

Correct XML format:

<?xml version="1.0"?>

<config

    xmlns:xs="http://www.w3.org/2001/XMLSchema-instance" xs:noNamespaceSchemaLocation="urn:magento:module:Magento_ExtensionAttributes:etc/extension_attributes.xsd"

>
```

    <extension_attributes for="Magento\Sales\Api\Data\InvoiceInterface">

        <attribute code="your_custom_attribute" type="string[]" />

    </extension_attributes>

</config>
