NEW QUESTION # 35

A user is currently in the directory /home/user/Downloads/ and runs the command ls ../Documents/ Assuming it exists, which directory's content is displayed?

- A. /home/user/Documents/Downloads/
- B. /Documents/
- C. /home/user/Downloads/Documents/
- D. /home/Documents
- E. /home/user/Documents/

Answer: E

Explanation:

The command ls ../Documents/ lists the contents of the directory /home/user/Documents/. The reason is that the argument ../Documents/ is a relative path that refers to the parent directory of the current directory, which is /home/user/, followed by the subdirectory Documents/. The ls command displays the files and directories in the specified path, or the current directory if no path is given. The command does not change the current directory, so the user remains in /home/user/Downloads/. Reference:

NEW QUESTION # 37

The current directory contains the following file:

-rw-r-r- 1 root exec 24551 Apr 2 12:36 test.sh

The file contains a valid shell script, but executing this file using ./test.sh leads to this error:

bash: ./test.sh: Permission denied

What should be done in order to successfully execute the script?

- A. The user executing the script should be added to the exec group.
- B. The SetUID bit should be set in the file's permissions
- C. The script should be run using `#!/test.sh` instead of `./test.sh`.
- D. The file's extension should be changed from `.sh` to `.bin`.
- E. The execute bit should be set in the file's permissions.

Answer: E

Explanation:

The execute bit in Linux is a permission bit that allows the user to run an executable file or enter a directory. For regular files, such as scripts or binaries, the execute bit must be set for the user to run them. For directories, the execute bit allows the user to access the files and subdirectories inside. Therefore, to successfully execute the script `test.sh`, the execute bit should be set in the file's permissions. This can be done by using the `chmod` command with the `+x` option, for example: `chmod +x test.sh`. The other options are either irrelevant or incorrect. The file's extension does not affect its executability, only its association with a program. The user executing the script does not need to be in the `exec` group, as long as the user has the execute permission on the file. The SetUID bit is a special permission bit that allows the user to run the file as the file's owner, regardless of the user's identity. This is not necessary for executing the script, and may pose a security risk. The `#!/test.sh` syntax is invalid, as the `#!` is used to specify the interpreter for the script, not the script itself.
