NEW QUESTION # 20

What protocol is used for Ping and Trace route?

- A. UDP - trace route
- B. TCP
- C. ICMP - ping
- D. DHCP
- E. IP

Answer: A,C

Explanation:

Both ping and traceroute are diagnostic tools used to test connectivity and network path behavior. While both use IP as the transport layer, they rely on specific protocols:

* Ping uses ICMP Echo Request and Echo Reply messages.

* Traceroute typically uses UDP packets with increasing TTL (Time-To-Live) values to discover each hop.

On MikroTik devices, ping uses ICMP and traceroute uses UDP by default (though ICMP traceroute is also available in some implementations).

* A. DHCP is unrelated. It's a protocol for IP address assignment.

* B. IP is a network-layer protocol underlying ICMP and UDP, but it's not the specific diagnostic protocol.

* C. TCP is a connection-oriented protocol, not used for ping/traceroute.

* D. Correct. ICMP is the protocol behind ping.

* E. Correct. UDP is used by default in traceroute to trigger ICMP Time Exceeded messages from routers.

Extract from Official MTCNA Course Material - Tools Section:

"Ping uses the ICMP protocol to send Echo Request and receive Echo Reply. Traceroute sends UDP packets with incremented TTL values to discover intermediate hops." Extract from Rene Meneses Study Guide - Diagnostic Tools:

"Traceroute in RouterOS sends UDP packets to a random port. Routers that receive the packet send ICMP Time Exceeded messages back when TTL expires. Ping uses ICMP directly." Extract from MikroTik Wiki - Ping and Traceroute:

"Ping uses ICMP protocol. Traceroute sends UDP packets, increasing TTL by one for each hop."
