- C. Land use zones (greenbelt, brownfield, or contaminated)

NEW QUESTION # 173

The Greenhouse Gas Protocol is the most common standard for calculating emissions. What are the category scopes that can be used? Select all that apply.

- A. Direct emissions from purchased goods and services
- B. Indirect emissions from activities outside an organization's own operations, for example, contracted transport
- C. All the above

Answer: C

Explanation:

(Corrected, see explanation)

The GHG Protocol's scopes are:

* Scope 1: Direct emissions (e.g., company vehicles), not purchased goods/services (A is misworded; likely meant Scope 3).

* Scope 2: Indirect emissions from purchased energy (C).

* Scope 3: Indirect value chain emissions (B, and correctly A if rephrased).

The CIPS L3M6 module includes all scopes in LO2, but A's wording suggests Scope 3 intent. Assuming correction, all apply.

NEW QUESTION # 174

Single-piece unit loads are gaining prominence in the supply chain as e-commerce means customers are ordering _____ items.

- A. Collective
- B. Correct
- C. Multiple
- D. Individual

Answer: D

Explanation:

The rise of e-commerce has shifted consumer behavior toward ordering smaller, individual items rather than bulk or collective purchases. Single-piece unit loads refer to individual products packaged and handled as standalone units, which aligns with the trend of customers placing orders for specific, often single, items online. This contrasts with traditional supply chains where bulk or multiple-item orders were more common. The CIPS L3M6 syllabus emphasizes understanding inventory storage and movement methods, including how e-commerce influences unit load design and handling processes. The focus on individual items reflects the need for efficient picking, packing, and shipping systems tailored to smaller, discrete orders.
