NCLEX-RN is a computer-based adaptive test (CAT) that consists of multiple-choice and alternate format questions. NCLEX-RN exam is designed to adapt to the test-taker's level of knowledge by adjusting the difficulty of questions based on their previous answers. NCLEX-RN Exam covers four major categories: Safe and Effective Care Environment, Health Promotion and Maintenance, Psychosocial Integrity, and Physiological Integrity.

NCLEX National Council Licensure Examination(NCLEX-RN) Sample Questions (Q830-Q835):

NEW QUESTION # 830

A new mother experiences strong uterine contractions while breast-feeding her baby. She excitedly rings for the nurse. When the nurse arrives the mother tells her, "Something is wrong. This is like my labor." Which reply by the nurse identifies the physiological response of the client?

- A. "Prolactin increases the blood supply to your uterus, and you are feeling the effects of this blood vessel engorgement."
- B. "There is probably a small blood clot or placental fragment in your uterus, and your uterus is contracting to expel it."
- C. "Your breasts are secreting a hormone that enters your bloodstream and causes your abdominal muscles to contract."

- D. "The same hormone that is released in response to the baby's sucking, causing milk to flow, also causes the uterus to contract."

Answer: D

Explanation:

Section: Questions Set F

Explanation:

(A) Mammary growth as well as milk production and maintenance in the breast occur in response to hormones produced primarily by the hypothalamus and the pituitary gland. (B) Prolactin stimulates the alveolar cells of the breast to produce milk. It is important in the initiation of breast-feeding. (C) Oxytocin, which is released by the posterior pituitary, stimulates the let-down reflex by contraction of the myoepithelial cells surrounding the alveoli. In addition, it causes contractions of the uterus and uterine involution. (D) Afterpains may occur with retained placental fragments. A boggy uterus and continued bleeding are other symptoms that occur in response to retained placental fragments.

NEW QUESTION # 831

When the nurse is evaluating lab data for a client 18-24 hours after a major thermal burn, the expected physiological changes would include which of the following?

- A. Elevated serum sodium
- B. Elevated serum calcium
- C. Elevated serum protein
- D. Elevated hematocrit

Answer: D

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

(A) Sodium enters the edema fluid in the burned area, lowering the sodium content of the vascular fluid.

Hyponatremia may continue for days to several weeks because of sodium loss to edema, sodium shifting into the cells, and later, diuresis. (B) Hypocalcemia occurs because of calcium loss to edema fluid at the burned site (third space fluid). (C) Protein loss occurs at the burn site owing to increased capillary permeability. Serum protein levels remain low until healing occurs. (D)

Hematocrit level is elevated owing to hemoconcentration from hypovolemia. Anemia is present in the postburn stage owing to blood loss and hemolysis, but it cannot be assessed until the client is adequately hydrated.

NEW QUESTION # 832

A 9-month-old infant was diagnosed with nonorganic failure to thrive. During her hospitalization, primary nurses were assigned to initiate all infant feedings. The infant's parents question why they cannot feed their own child. Which of the following responses would be most appropriate by the nurse?

- A. The same nurses will prevent parental fatigue and frustration.
- B. By assigning the same nurses to the child, the nurses can begin to learn the infant's cues and feeding behaviors.
- C. The same nurses will prevent infant fatigue and frustration.
- D. Primary nurses will ensure privacy.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

(A) Consistent primary care nurses can better interpret infant cues and note feeding behaviors. (B) In nonorganic failure to thrive the parent-infant dyad has already experienced difficulties in the relationship.

These parents may already feel dissatisfied and frustrated. The primary nurse would be unable to prevent this. (C) Assigning a primary nurse does not ensure that infant fatigue and frustration will not occur or can be prevented. (D) Providing privacy does not ensure a change in feeding behavior.

NEW QUESTION # 833

Which of the following medications requires close observation for bronchospasm in the client with chronic obstructive pulmonary disease or asthma?

- A. Amrinone (Inocor)
- B. Propranolol (Inderal)
- C. Epinephrine (Adrenalin)
- D. Verapamil (Isoptin)

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation

(A) Verapamil has the respiratory side effect of nasal or chest congestion, dyspnea, shortness of breath (SOB), and wheezing. (B) Amrinone has the effect of increased contractility and dilation of the vascular smooth muscle. It has no noted respiratory side effects. (C) Epinephrine has the effect of bronchodilation through stimulation. (D) Propranolol, esmolol, and labetalol are all - blocking agents, which can increase airway resistance and cause bronchospasms.

NEW QUESTION # 834

Which of the following should the nurse anticipate receiving as an as-needed order for a postoperative carotid endarterectomy client?

- A. Nifedipine 10 mg SL for B/P 140/90
- B. Furosemide 20 mg/PO for decreased urine output
- C. Nitroglycerin gr 1/150 for chest pain
- D. Magnesium salicylate to decrease inflammation

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

(A) It is important to maintain a normal to slightly lower pressure to prevent the graft from blowing and excessive pressure to surgical vascular areas. (B, C, D) None of these drugs is related to managing the problem at hand. Also, none of the problems for which these drugs would be indicated is expected with this type of surgery, except if there is a prior history.
