NEW QUESTION # 81

A company requires that object data that is unused for a period of 12 months should be moved to AWS Glacier. This should be applied immediately to all new and existing data within the organization.
An administrator creates and applies the tiering rule. but observes that no existing data is moved from buckets where the tiering rule is applied, despite being created over 12 months ago.
What is the reason for data over 12 months old failing to tier?

- A. Enable versioning has not been selected on the Tiering Endpoint configuration.
- B. Tiering lifecycle policies are non-retroactive.
- C. The category has not been added to existing data.
- D. Apply to existing data option has not been selected on the lifecycle rule.

Answer: D

Explanation:
According to Nutanix Support & Insights1, "When you create a lifecycle policy for a bucket, you can choose whether to apply it only to new objects that are added after creating the policy or also apply it retroactively to existing objects." Therefore, if this option is not selected, then existing data will not be moved by the tiering rule.
