NEW QUESTION # 237

Refer to the exhibit.

A consultant migrated multiple VMs to a new cluster. VMs were previously in VLAN 10. Why can the VMs no longer communicate on their network?

- A. The VNIC type should be set to VMXNET2.
- B. Static IP addresses have not been assigned to the new VMs.
- C. The VLAN ID is incorrect.
- D. The GuestOS firewall is blocking traffic in the new cluster.

Answer: C

Explanation:

In scenarios where VMs have been migrated to a new cluster and they were previously on VLAN 10 but can no longer communicate, the most likely cause is that the VLAN ID setting on the virtual network interface cards (VNICs) of the VMs does not match the VLAN configuration of the new network. Ensuring that the VLAN IDs are correctly set to match the network configuration of the new cluster is essential for proper network communication. References:

NEW QUESTION # 238

An administrator needs to forecast infrastructure requirements for a new program and its associated applications. Prior to the projected start of the new program, all existing applications will be decommissioned.

How should the administrator perform this task?

- A. Add up the recovered workloads and manually remove from the Runway configuration.
- B. Check the Disregard Existing Nodes radio button in the Runway scenario.
- C. Power down the workloads during a maintenance window and run the Capacity Runway.
- D. Check the Disregard Existing Workloads radio button in the Runway scenario.

Answer: D

Explanation:

When forecasting infrastructure requirements for a new program in a Nutanix environment where all existing applications will be decommissioned, the most straightforward method is to disregard any workload calculations that include existing applications. This ensures that the analysis focuses solely on the needs of the new program.

Option A, "Check the Disregard Existing Workloads radio button in the Runway scenario," is the correct choice. Nutanix Runway is a tool designed to help administrators forecast and plan infrastructure requirements based on upcoming needs without being skewed by current utilizations that are scheduled to be decommissioned.

This method allows for a cleaner, more accurate projection of resources needed for the new applications, disregarding any resources currently in use that will no longer be relevant.

References: This approach is detailed in Nutanix planning and forecasting documentation, ensuring administrators can plan accurately for infrastructure changes and needs without the interference of outgoing workloads.

NEW QUESTION # 239

A consultant creates three storage containers (container-1, container-2, container-3). The customer requires that only container-1, which will be utilized as an NFS datastore, be presented to external hosts.

However, users are able to mount all three containers.

What is causing this problem?

- A. Compression was turned on for all containers.
- B. A Container-level whitelist entry was configured.
- C. A Global whitelist entry was configured.
- D. Deduplication was turned on for all containers.

Answer: C

Explanation:

The issue where users can mount all three storage containers despite the intention to restrict access to just container-1 typically stems from a Global whitelist entry. A global whitelist allows all entities to access all containers unless more specific restrictions are applied at the container level. To correct this, specific whitelist entries need to be configured for each container to define and restrict access appropriately. References:

NEW QUESTION # 240

A customer is deploying Nutanix AHV clusters over hundreds of remote sites worldwide. Prism Central will be used to centrally manage all clusters. Customer security policy requires the use of MS Active Directory (AD) groups to authenticate all network devices.

- A. Integrate AD authentication on all CVMs.
- B. Integrate AD authentication on all Prism Element Clusters.
- C. Integrate AD authentication on Prism Central Only.
