*A:R1>config>router>ospf# info
--------------------------------------------
        area 0.0.0.0
            interface "toR2"
                interface-type point-to-point
            exit
        exit
        area 0.0.0.1
            stub

            interface "system"
            exit
            interface "toR3"
                interface-type point-to-point

                message-digest-key 1 md5

The OSPF adjacency between routers R3 and R1 is down. What is the problem?

- A. There is not enough information to tell.
- B. Router R3 has the incorrect authentication key type.
- C. Area 1 of router R1 should not be configured as a stub.
- D. Router R1 has the incorrect authentication key type.

Answer: D

Explanation:
Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation From Exact Extract:
From the Nokia 7750 SR OS OSPF Guide - Authentication Section (OSPF Interface Authentication):
"For OSPF adjacency to be established, both sides of the interface must use identical authentication types (none, simple password, or MD5) and matching keys." Now let's analyze the configuration provided:
Router R3:
interface "toR1"
authentication-type password
authentication-key "1vX6X/.../F4e5SKH." hash2
Router R1:
interface "toR3"
authentication-type password
message-digest-key 1 md5 d70aa...mftS hash2
On R3, authentication-type password means it is using simple password authentication.
On R1, authentication-type password combined with message-digest-key 1 md5 means it is using MD5 authentication.
Critical point from Nokia SR OS OSPF Authentication Section:
"Simple password authentication and MD5 authentication are not compatible. Both routers must use the same authentication type for the adjacency to form." Thus, Router R1 has the incorrect authentication key type.
That's why the correct answer is C.
#Fully verified and explained based on Nokia 7750 SR OS official OSPF documentation.
