ISC Certified Information Systems Security Professional (CISSP) Sample Questions (Q1517-Q1522):

NEW QUESTION # 1517

Examples of types of physical access controls include all EXCEPT which of the following?

- A. locks
- B. guards
- C. badges
- D. passwords

Answer: D

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

Access control needs to be enforced through physical and technical components when it comes to physical security. Physical access controls use mechanisms to identify individuals who are attempting to enter a facility or area. They make sure the right individuals get in and the wrong individuals stay out, and provide an audit trail of these actions.

A physical security control is a physical item put into place to protect facility, personnel, and resources.

Examples of physical access controls include badges, locks, guards, fences, barriers, RFID cards etc. A password is not a physical object; it is something you know. Therefore, a password is not an example of a physical access control.

Incorrect Answers:

A: A badge is a physical object. Therefore, this answer is incorrect.

B: A lock is a physical object. Therefore, this answer is incorrect.

C: A guard is a physical object; a person working as a guard counts as a physical access control.

Therefore, this answer is incorrect.

NEW QUESTION # 1518

When two different keys encrypt a plaintext message into the same ciphertext, this situation is known as:

- A. Cryptanalysis.
- B. Hashing.
- C. Public key cryptography.
- D. Key clustering.

Answer: D

Explanation:

The correct answer is "Key clustering"

Answer "Public key cryptography" describes a type of cryptographic system using a public and a private key; answer Cryptanalysis is the art/science of breaking ciphers; answer Hashing is the conversion of a message of variable length into a fixed-length message digest.

NEW QUESTION # 1519

Which of the following was developed as a simple mechanism for allowing simple network terminals to load their operating system from a server over the LAN?

- A. ARP
- B. BootP
- C. DNS
- D. DHCP

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

BOOTP has been used for Unix-like diskless workstations to obtain the network location of their boot image, in addition to the IP address assignment. Enterprises used it to roll out a pre-configured client (e.g., Windows) installation to newly installed PCs.

Incorrect Answers:

A: DHCP is a network protocol used on IP networks for dynamically distributing network configuration parameters, such as IP addresses for interfaces and services.

C: DNS translates domain names into IP addresses, which enables us to use domain names instead of IP addresses.

D: The ARP protocol translates IP addresses to MAC Addresses.
