Which of the following statements about static route configuration is correct?

- A. The next hop is mandatory.
- B. The mask parameter is mandatory.
- C. The preference is mandatory.
- D. The mask parameter is optional.

Answer: B

Explanation:

When configuring a static route, certain parameters are required for the route to function correctly. Let us analyze each option:

* Option A :

* Incorrect : The preference (or administrative distance) is optional. If not specified, the router uses the default preference value for static routes.

* Option B :

* Incorrect : While the next-hop IP address is commonly used in static route configuration, it is not always mandatory. For example, you can specify an outgoing interface instead of a next-hop address.

* Option C :

* Incorrect : The subnet mask is essential for defining the network prefix of the destination network. Without the mask, the router cannot determine the range of IP addresses covered by the route.

* Option D :

* Correct : The subnet mask is mandatory when configuring a static route. It defines the network portion of the destination IP address, enabling the router to match packets to the correct route.

Thus, the correct answer is D .
