- A. Create a new describe block for each test.
- B. Create a new jsdom instance for each test.
- C. Add a teardown block to reset the DOM after each test.
- D. Reset the DOM after each test with the afterEach() method.

NEW QUESTION # 162

A developer is creating a page in App Builder that will be used in the Salesforce mobile app.

Which two practices should the developer follow to ensure the page operates with optimal performance?

Choose 2 answers

- A. Limit the number of Tabs and Accordion components.
- B. Limit five visible components on the page.
- C. Limit 25 fields on the record detail page.
- D. Analyze the page with Performance Analysis for App Builder.

Answer: C,D

Explanation:

The two practices that the developer should follow to ensure the page operates with optimal performance are to limit 25 fields on the record detail page, and to analyze the page with Performance Analysis for App Builder. Limiting 25 fields on the record detail page reduces the amount of data that needs to be loaded and rendered on the page, and improves the responsiveness and usability of the page. Analyzing the page with Performance Analysis for App Builder allows the developer to identify and optimize the components that affect the page performance, such as the number of server calls, the data size, and the render time. The developer can access the Performance Analysis for App Builder tool from the App Builder menu, and view the performance metrics and recommendations for each component on the page. Limiting the number of Tabs and Accordion components will not affect the performance of the page, as these components are used to organize the content and layout of the page, but they do not increase the data load or render time. Limiting five visible components on the page will not affect the performance of the page, as the number of visible components does not determine the performance of the page, but the data size and server calls of each component do.
