A customer is preparing to expand a cluster with a consultant. The production cluster is comprised of one NX-3460-G7 and two NX-8235 G8 blocks. The running AOS version is 5.20.4.6 and Hypervisor version is ESXi 6.7 U3b. vCenter is also running a 6.7 version.

One NX-3235-G9 block will be added to that cluster (ESXI-NUTA-09 and ESXI-NUTA-10).

The consultant has verified Nutanix documentation and customer's As-Built guide:

*NX-3060-G7 and NX-8035-G8 are hybrid HCI nodes

*ESXi 6.7 U3b is unsupported for the new G9 hardware model

*AOS 5.20.X and ESXi 6 X are end of support

*NX-3060-G7 and NX-8035-G8 hypervisors can be upgraded to the latest ESXi supported version What actions should be taken before beginning the cluster expansion?

- A. Prepare Foundation and the whitelist. json file to deploy ESXi 6.7 U3b on the new nodes.
- B. Upgrade vCenter, AOS and ESXi to supported and recommended versions.
- C. Upgrade only AOS and ESXi to supported and recommended versions.
- D. Replace all HDDs with SSDs on the Production cluster.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Before expanding the cluster with the new NX-3235-G9 block, it is critical to ensure that all components are running supported and recommended versions due to compatibility and support issues. Therefore, the necessary actions include: A. Upgrade vCenter, AOS, and ESXi to supported and recommended versions. This step ensures compatibility across all components, particularly important as the new G9 hardware does not support the currently installed version of ESXi. Upgrading these components will also ensure continued vendor support and the stability of the environment. Options B, C, and D do not adequately address the need for vCenter upgrades or the fact that ESXi 6.7 U3b is unsupported for G9, highlighting the necessity for a comprehensive upgrade. References: Nutanix Hardware Compatibility List, Nutanix Support Portal.

NEW QUESTION # 123

The following alert appears on the file server alerts tab in the file server dashboard:

File Server FS47-SS has multiple VMs on a single node

Which two events can generate this alert? (choose two)

- A. A node failed in a three-node cluster.
- B. A three-node cluster hosting the file server is undergoing AOS upgrade.
- C. A node is set to the maintenance mode in a three node cluster.
- D. A Nutanix file with four hie server VMs is deployed on a three-node cluster.

Answer: A,C

Explanation:

An alert of this nature in the file server dashboard usually indicates issues related to node availability within a cluster. Specifically, the failure of a node in a three-node cluster (Option B) can lead to insufficient resources to handle all tasks, which might trigger such an alert. Additionally, setting a node to maintenance mode in a three-node cluster (Option D) also disrupts service availability and could generate a similar alert, as the remaining nodes might struggle to handle the load or maintain data redundancy. NEW QUESTION # 124

An administrator of a Nutanix Enterprise Cloud has microsegmentation enabled and a firewall VM installed.

The security team notifies the administrator that one of the VMs hosted in the environment has been exhibiting suspect network activity. The administrator wants to isolate the VM from the production network, but must still be able to access it to perform diagnostics.

What should the administrator do to meet the requirement?

- A. Disable the vNIC on the affected VM
- B. Create a firewall rule that blocks VM traffic but permits diagnostic access
- C. Quarantine the VM using the Forensic Method
- D. Create a security policy with a service chain directing that VMs traffic to the firewall VM

Answer: C

Explanation:

Nutanix flow – Quarantine security policy

Quarantine policy in Nutanix flow is predefined and build into the product. You cannot modify it or change it or create a new quarantine policy.

Quarantine policy in Nutanix Flow has two methods:

- Forensic – VM cannot talk to anything in the network, except to the specific forensic tools configured in the policy
- Strict – VM cannot talk to anything in the network

NEW QUESTION # 125

After a recent installation using a flat switch, a consultant notices issues migrating the Nutanix nodes to the customer's network. The customer states that they are using VLANs on the production switch but not on the dedicated switch for IPMI. The customer does not require a manual configuration of the host and CVM.

What network changes need to be made to correct the issues?

- A. Use Native VLANs for the CVM and host and trunk mode for IPMI.
- B. Use tagged VLANs for the CVM and host and access mode for IPMI.
- C. Use Native VLANs for the CVM and host and access mode for IPMI.
- D. Us untagged VLANs for the CVM and host and trunk mode for IPMI.

Answer: C
