A consultant is deploying a cluster using the customer-provided IP addressing information.

Which option in Foundation must be configured to ensure connectivity during the deployment?

- A. Range Autofill
- B. Network Segmentation
- C. Multi-homing
- D. Link Aggregation

Answer: A

Explanation:

During the deployment of a cluster using the Nutanix Foundation, ensuring all IP ranges are correctly configured is crucial for successful connectivity and deployment. "Range Autofill" is a feature in Foundation that automatically populates IP address fields based on the first IP provided, ensuring consistency and correctness across multiple nodes being deployed simultaneously. This feature helps avoid manual entry errors and ensures all nodes are configured with appropriate IP addresses that fall within the specified range.

NEW QUESTION # 113

What should a consultant consider when completing a bare-metal imaging process?

- A. Ensure that the CD ROM appears last in the BIOS boot order to avoid Foundation timeout.
- B. Enable STP by using PortFast or an equivalent feature on the ports that are connected to the Nutanix host.
- C. Avoid connecting any device to the node USB port that presents virtual media such as a CD-ROM.
- D. Connect to a managed switch with routing tables to protect the production environment against configuration errors.

Answer: C

Explanation:

When completing a bare-metal imaging process, it is crucial to avoid connecting any device to the node's USB port that presents virtual media such as a CD-ROM. This is important because such devices can interfere with the imaging process, potentially leading to errors or misconfigurations by presenting alternative boot options or media.
