NEW QUESTION # 20

Your client's account receivables department has a requirement to automatically re-charge customers for the difference on short paid invoices. Channel Revenue Management supports a settlement method for managing invoice deductions, by automatically creating a chargeback in Receivables for the value of the claim and applying the chargeback to the original invoice.

Which settlement method(s) may be combined with this function?

- A. This function cannot be combined with other methods
- B. This function can be combined with a credit memo
- C. This function can be combined with all other methods
- D. This function can be combined with a debit memo

Answer: A

Explanation:

This function cannot be combined with other methods

This function cannot be combined with other methods because it is a standalone settlement method that closes the original invoice and creates a chargeback for the value of the claim. A chargeback is a negative invoice that reduces the amount owed by the customer and is applied to the original invoice¹. This function is used to settle invalid invoice deductions, such as short payments, discounts, or disputes². Other settlement methods, such as credit memo or debit memo, are used to settle valid invoice deductions, such as allowances, rebates, or promotions³.
