CIPS Ethical and Responsible Sourcing Sample Questions (Q155-Q160):

NEW QUESTION # 155

What might a buyer encounter if the supplier's government has introduced a protectionist measure?

- A. Import duties

- B. Arbitration
- C. Carnets
- D. Inward processing relief

Answer: A

Explanation:

Protectionist measures are policies implemented by governments to protect domestic industries from foreign competition. One common protectionist measure is the imposition of import duties, which are taxes levied on imported goods. These duties make imported products more expensive, encouraging consumers to buy domestic products instead. Buyers sourcing internationally must be aware of such duties as they directly impact the total cost of procurement.

Exact Extract from Study Guide:

"Furthermore, there are many potential cost considerations when importing goods which can include taxes & duties or storage costs. By understanding all key legal, regulatory and organizational requirements prior to sourcing from international suppliers, businesses can ensure compliance while also maximizing cost savings."

NEW QUESTION # 156

A buyer is considering trading with a new overseas supplier and wants to assess anti-bribery risks in that country. Which information sources would be useful? (Select TWO)

- A. Transparency International (TI)
- B. Local Anti-Corruption Legislation
- C. United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (UNSDGs)
- D. International Court of Arbitration (ICC)
- E. International Standards Organisation (ISO)

Answer: A,B

Explanation:

Local anti-corruption laws (A) provide insight into the legal framework and enforcement environment, while Transparency International (B) publishes the Corruption Perceptions Index and reports on bribery risks worldwide. These are reliable sources for assessing corruption levels and associated risks. UNSDGs set broad sustainability goals but not country-specific corruption risks. The ICC deals with arbitration, not anti-bribery.

ISO standards provide frameworks for compliance but do not analyse country risk. Responsible sourcing requires due diligence on governance environments to mitigate bribery risks and comply with anti-corruption legislation such as the UK Bribery Act.

NEW QUESTION # 157

Which of the following is a regulatory body which protects the rights of workers?

- A. ISO
- B. ILO
- C. FairTrade
- D. WWF

Answer: B

Explanation:

ILO = the International Labour Organisation.

ISO is the International Standardisation Organisation- they also come up in this exam

Fair Trade is about paying suppliers properly.

WWF is the World Wildlife Foundation, or if you watched wrestling in the 90s, the original WWE. You do not need to know about wildlife or wrestling for this exam.

NEW QUESTION # 158

When assessing social responsibility elements of a supplier's proposal, what type of supporting evidence could a supplier provide?

- A. Results of a customer service survey on delivery performance

- B. Financial statements detailing profit and loss accounts
- C. Quality control reports documenting quality checks in the manufacturing process
- D. Evidence of compliance with fair trade standards

Answer: D

Explanation:

Compliance with fair trade standards demonstrates the supplier's commitment to social responsibility, including fair wages and ethical working conditions. This aligns with responsible sourcing practices, ensuring that suppliers maintain ethical labor standards, as advocated in the principles of ethical sourcing.

NEW QUESTION # 159

A buyer is only interested in working with suppliers who have strong Environmental and Social Governance practices. It is therefore using ethical criteria as supplier selection stage to determine which suppliers to work with. Which of the following statements is true?

- A. compliance with Codes of Conduct from professional bodies is mandatory
- B. ethical behaviour is impossible to determine as issues such as Modern Slavery often go undetected
- C. the buyer should ask suppliers to be accredited to ISO9001 a supplier who follows the CIPS Code of Conduct is more likely to meet the buyer's needs

Answer: C

Explanation:

A supplier who follows the CIPS Code of Conduct is more likely to meet the buyer's needs is the correct answer.

The other options are wrong:

- 1) Compliance with Codes of Conduct from professional bodies is optional. E.g. CIPS - no organisation is forced to comply with CIPS.
- 2) Unethical behaviour is not impossible to detect, it may be difficult but with correct due diligence and things like audits it's completely possible
- 3) ISO 14001 is quality management so is irrelevant.
