NEW QUESTION # 65

Which two can be used to push data between cubes?

- A. Import Data
- B. Data Maps
- C. Copy Data

- D. Data Integration

Answer: B,C

Explanation:

In Oracle Planning 2024, pushing data between cubes (e.g., from one cube to another within the same application) can be accomplished using specific tools. The two methods that facilitate this are:

- * A. Data Integration: Incorrect. Data Integration is used to import data from external sources (e.g., files, other systems) into Planning, not to push data between cubes within the same application.
- * B. Data Maps: Correct. Data Maps allow you to define mappings and push data between cubes (or applications) using Smart Push or manual execution. This is a primary method for intra-application data movement.
- * C. Copy Data: Correct. The Copy Data feature enables administrators to copy data from one cube to another within the same Planning application, specifying dimensions and members to transfer.
- * D. Import Data: Incorrect. Import Data is designed to bring external data into a cube from a file, not to push data between existing cubes.

Both Data Maps (with Smart Push for real-time updates) and Copy Data (for batch-style transfers) are explicitly supported for moving data between cubes, as per Oracle's documentation, making B and C the correct answers.
