RBI plans identify equipment that does not require inspection or some other form of mitigation because of the acceptable level of risk associated with the equipment's current operation. In this way, inspection and maintenance activities can be:

- A. eliminated for all low consequence equipment.
- B. shifted to more profitable needs in the plant.
- C. more focused and cost effective.
- D. conducted while the equipment is on-line instead of during turnarounds.

Answer: C

Explanation:

As stated in API 580, Introduction (page xi):

"The RBI plans also identify equipment that does not require inspection or some other form of mitigation because of the acceptable level of risk associated with the equipment's current operation. In this way, inspection and maintenance activities can be focused and more cost-effective." Options B, C, and D introduce concepts not aligned with the API definition. Option A correctly captures the intent and benefit of an RBI-based plan.
