CompTIA A+ Certification Exam: Core 2 Sample Questions (Q625-Q630):

NEW QUESTION # 625

A mobile phone user has downloaded a new payment application that allows payments to be made with a mobile device. The user attempts to use the device at a payment terminal but is unable to do so successfully. The user contacts a help desk technician to report the issue. Which of the following should the technician confirm NEXT as part of the troubleshooting process?

- A. If airplane mode is enabled
- B. If WiFi is enabled
- C. If NFC is enabled
- D. If Bluetooth is disabled

- E. If location services are disabled

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation: NFC stands for Near Field Communication, and it is a wireless technology that allows your phone to act as a contactless payment device, among other things<sup>2</sup>. Payment applications that allow payments to be made with a mobile device usually rely on NFC to communicate with the payment terminal<sup>1</sup>. Therefore, if NFC is disabled on the phone, the payment will not work.

To enable NFC on an Android phone, you need to follow these steps<sup>3</sup>:

On your Android device, open the Settings app.

Select Connected devices.

Tap on Connection preferences.

You should see the NFC option. Toggle it on.

The other options are not directly related to using a payment application with a mobile device. Airplane mode is a setting that disables all wireless communication on the phone, including NFC<sup>4</sup>, but it also affects calls, texts, and internet access. Bluetooth is a wireless technology that allows you to connect your phone with other devices such as headphones or speakers, but it is not used for contactless payments. Wi-Fi is a wireless technology that allows you to access the internet or a local network, but it is also not used for contactless payments. Location services are a feature that allows your phone to determine your geographic location using GPS or other methods, but they are not required for contactless payments.

NEW QUESTION # 627

A user opened a ticket regarding a corporate-managed mobile device. The assigned technician notices the OS is several versions out of date. The user is unaware the OS version is not current because auto-update is turned on. Which of the following is MOST likely the cause of the issue?

- A. The device does not have enough free space to download the OS updates.
- B. The device is not compatible with the newest version of the OS.
- C. The device is restricted from updating due to a corporate security policy.
- D. The device needs domain administrator confirmation to update to a major release.

Answer: C

Explanation:

A corporate security policy can restrict a corporate-managed mobile device from updating its OS automatically, even if the auto-update feature is turned on. This can be done to prevent compatibility issues, security risks or performance problems caused by untested or unwanted updates. The device administrator can control when and how the updates are applied to the device. The device not having enough free space, needing domain administrator confirmation or being incompatible with the newest version of the OS are not likely causes of the issue, since the user would receive an error message or a notification in those cases.
