NEW QUESTION #743

An application is not performing well and will occasionally shut down with no error provided. Which of the following Task Manager tabs should be used to troubleshoot the application while it is active?

- A. Users
- B. Services
- C. Performance
- D. Startup

Answer: C

Explanation:

When troubleshooting an application that is not performing well and occasionally shuts down with no error, the "Performance" tab in Task Manager is the most appropriate tool to use. This tab provides real-time data on CPU, memory, disk, and network usage, which can help identify resource bottlenecks or spikes that could be causing the application to malfunction. Monitoring these metrics while the application is running can offer insights into whether the issue is related to system resources.

- * A. Users tab shows which users are currently logged into the system and their resource usage but does not provide detailed performance metrics for troubleshooting application issues.
- * B. Services tab shows the status of background services but does not provide direct information about the application's performance.
- * D. Startup tab manages which applications start with Windows and their impact on startup time but is not useful for monitoring active application performance.

NEW QUESTION #744

A systems administrator received a request to limit the amount of cellular data a user's Windows 10 tablet can utilize when traveling. Which of the following can the administrator do to best solve the user's issue?

- A. Set the connection to be metered.
- B. Configure the device to use a static IP address.
- C. Turn on airplane mode.
- D. Enable the Windows Defender Firewall.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Setting the connection to be metered is the best solution for limiting the amount of cellular data a user's Windows 10 tablet can utilize when traveling. A metered connection is a network connection that has a data limit or charges fees based on the amount of data used. Windows 10 allows users to set any network connection as metered, which reduces the amount of data that Windows and some apps use in the background. For example, setting a connection as metered will prevent Windows from downloading updates automatically, stop some apps from syncing data online, and disable some live tiles on the Start menu. Setting a connection as metered can help users save cellular data and avoid extra charges when traveling. Turning on airplane mode, configuring the device to use a static IP address, and enabling the Windows Defender Firewall are not effective solutions for limiting the amount of cellular data a user's Windows 10 tablet can utilize when traveling. Turning on airplane mode will disable all wireless connections on the device, including Wi-Fi, Bluetooth, and cellular data. This will prevent the user from accessing any online services or applications on the tablet. Configuring the device to use a static IP address will assign a fixed IP address to the device instead of obtaining one dynamically from a DHCP server. This will not affect the amount of cellular data the device uses, and it may cause IP conflicts or connectivity issues on some networks. Enabling the Windows Defender Firewall will block or allow incoming and outgoing network traffic based on predefined or custom rules. This will not reduce the amount of cellular data the device uses, and it may interfere with some apps or services that require network access. Reference:

NEW QUESTION #745

Which of the following items require special e-waste recycling? (Select two).

* Solid-state drive

- A. Power supply
- B. Laptop battery
- C. A/C adapter
- D. Surge protector
- E. CRT monitor

Answer: A.E

Explanation:

Some electronic items require special e-waste recycling because they contain hazardous materials that can harm the environment and human health if disposed of improperly12. Laptop batteries and CRT monitors are examples of such items.

Laptop batteries are usually made of lithium-ion or nickel-metal hydride, which are both toxic and flammable substances 34. If laptop batteries are thrown in the trash, they can leak, catch fire, or explode, causing pollution and injuries 5. Therefore, laptop batteries should be recycled at authorized collection centers or through manufacturer take-back programs.

CRT monitors are old types of display devices that use cathode ray tubes, which are glass tubes that emit electrons to create images on the screen . CRT monitors contain lead, mercury, cadmium, and phosphor, which are all harmful metals that can contaminate the soil, water, and air if dumped in landfills . Therefore, CRT monitors should be recycled at certified e-waste facilities or through retailer or manufacturer trade-in programs

- C. Dust particles can clog the machines.
- D. Insects can invade the data center.
