NEW QUESTION # 76

An engineer wants to only allow the registration of endpoints with aliases containing cisco.com as the domain. Which option accomplishes this task?

- A. Set the restriction policy to "None" and include the expression \1@cisco.com in the allow list.
- B. Set the restriction policy to "Deny" and include the expression.@ in the deny list.
- C. Set the restriction policy to "Allow" and include the expression \1@cisco.com in the allow list.
- D. Set the restriction policy to "Allow" and include the expression.*@cisco.com in the allow list.

Answer: D

Explanation:

= To restrict the registration of endpoints based on their aliases, you can use the restriction policy feature on the Cisco Expressway. The restriction policy can be set to "Allow", "Deny", or "None". If you set it to

"Allow", you can specify a list of regular expressions that match the aliases of the endpoints that you want to allow. Any endpoint that does not match any of the expressions in the allow list will be rejected. If you set it to "Deny", you can specify a list of regular expressions that match the aliases of the endpoints that you want to deny. Any endpoint that matches any of the expressions in the deny list will be rejected. If you set it to

"None", you can disable the restriction policy feature and allow all endpoints to register.

In this question, the engineer wants to only allow the registration of endpoints with aliases containing cisco.

com as the domain. Therefore, the best option is to set the restriction policy to "Allow" and include the expression.*@cisco.com in the allow list. This expression will match any alias that ends with @cisco.com, such as user1@cisco.com, user2@cisco.com, etc.

Any other alias that does not end with @cisco.com, such as user3@gmail.com, user4@company.com, etc., will not match the expression and will be rejected.
