- B. Each team member plays a role in performing test-related tasks but only testers are responsible for product quality
- C. Testers may have difficulty keeping pace with the incoming changes in time-boxed iterations
- D. When adopting test-driven development, testers write all the tests while developers write all the code to make these tests pass

Answer: C

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation From Exact Extract:

From CTFL-AT Syllabus v4.0, Section 2.4 and 2.5:

"Due to frequent changes and short iterations, testers must be flexible and responsive. However, keeping up with pace can be a challenge." Thus, Option D is correct - testers may struggle with rapid changes and short feedback loops, which is a known challenge in Agile.

* Option A is false - testers still measure coverage and report defects.

* Option B misrepresents TDD - developers typically write the unit tests in TDD.

* Option C is incorrect - quality is a shared responsibility in Agile.

NEW QUESTION # 24

Which of the following sentences about the integration of development and testing activities in Agile projects is INCORRECT?

- A. Developers write acceptance criteria and test cases, together with testers.
- B. Testers replace developers in writing unit test automation scripts.
- C. While developers develop automated unit test scripts, testers write automated system level tests.
- D. Developers and testers may work as a pair to develop and test a feature.

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 25

What is the main benefit of the Test Pyramid?

- A. It means testing is involved early in the development cycle.
- B. It shows complexity of testing activities.
- C. It acts as a metric for testing progress.
- D. It helps in evaluating the amount of test cases needed.

Answer: D

Explanation:

The Test Pyramid is a model for organizing tests in a way to make the process of testing faster, efficient and cost-effective. This model focusses on getting maximum functional testing getting covered by faster and less brittle tests like Unit and API tests. The main benefit of the Test Pyramid is that it helps in evaluating the amount of test cases needed for each level of testing. The Test Pyramid suggests that the number of test cases should decrease as we move up the pyramid, from unit tests to integration tests to end-to-end tests. This is because unit tests are more granular, isolated, and easy to write and maintain, while end-to-end tests are more complex, dependent, and brittle. The Test Pyramid also helps in balancing the test coverage and the test execution time, as unit tests provide high coverage and low execution time, while end-to-end tests provide low coverage and high execution time. By following the Test Pyramid, teams can optimize their testing efforts and resources, and ensure that they have a sufficient and effective test suite for their software. References:

NEW QUESTION # 26

Which of the following statements about test automation and regression risk in Agile projects is true?

- A. Regression risk is reduced when there is a high degree of code changes being applied from one iteration to the next
- B. Technical debt is due to manual testing and it cannot be present when the team implements test automation
- C. Test automation can help to manage regression risk since it allows the running of regression test suites within each iteration
- D. Automated unit tests are generally not run with each code check-in as they take longer to run than automated acceptance tests and could slow down the code check-in process

Answer: C

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation From Exact Extract:

From CTFL-AT Syllabus v4.0, Section 4.3 Test Automation and Continuous Integration, it states:

"Automated tests help detect regression defects quickly and can be run frequently during development, thus reducing regression risk." So, Option D is correct - test automation supports regression testing within iterations, making it an essential Agile practice.

* Option A is false - automated unit tests are designed to be fast and are ideally run with every check-in.

* Option B is incorrect - more code changes increase, not reduce, regression risk.

* Option C is incorrect - technical debt can still exist with automation if the automation is poorly designed or not maintained.

NEW QUESTION # 27

Which of the following is a benefit of a whole-team approach?

- A. Enables the various skill sets within the team to be leveraged to the benefit of the project.
- B. Enables the team to focus on solely their separate areas of expertise and responsibility.
- C. Enables reduction in test duplication as the testers and test engineers function as a single team.
- D. Enables testers to execute their responsibility for quality for the combined team.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation

A whole-team approach is a way of working in agile projects where all team members share the responsibility for delivering high-quality software that meets the customer's needs. This means that testers, developers, business analysts, and other roles collaborate closely throughout the project lifecycle, and use their different skills and perspectives to contribute to the quality of the product. A benefit of this approach is that it enables the team to leverage the various skill sets within the team to the benefit of the project, such as testing skills, coding skills, domain knowledge, user experience, etc. This can lead to faster feedback, better communication, higher productivity, and more innovation.
