- A. Rejected - would take too long to fix
- B. Rejected - system is functioning as designed

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 168

Which of the following is a generic good practice when evaluating and selecting a test tool?

- A. Identify internal requirements for coaching, mentoring or training in its use
- B. Run a pilot project to validate the selection criteria
- C. Plan a proof-of-concept to be performed by the first project that uses the tool
- D. Define the ownership of the tool

Answer: B

Explanation:

Running a pilot project is an established good practice in test tool selection. It helps verify assumptions and evaluate tool fit for purpose in a realistic setting.

"After completing the tool selection and a successful proof-of-concept, introducing the selected tool into an organization generally starts with a pilot project..."

- ISTQB-CTFL_Syllabus_2018_V3.1, section 6.2.2

The other options refer to related but different phases or are not sufficient alone for tool evaluation.

NEW QUESTION # 169

You are the Test Manager for a critical system and are using a risk-based approach for this project.

Which of the following would most clearly convey the current status to project stakeholders? [3]

- A. A scatter chart showing test execution status
- B. A bar graph showing defect density
- C. A Pareto graph showing requirements coverage
- D. A pie chart showing residual risk

Answer: D

Explanation:

The most clear way to convey the current status to project stakeholders is to use a pie chart showing residual risk. This is because a risk-based approach focuses on identifying, analyzing, and prioritizing the risks that may affect the quality of the system, and allocating testing resources accordingly. A pie chart can visually represent the proportion of each risk category (such as high, medium, or low) in the overall risk profile, and show how much risk has been reduced or remains after testing. This can help the stakeholders to understand the current level of confidence in the system, and the potential impact of any remaining risks. Which two items are MOST important for inclusion in your tool selection plan for batch-only performance testing?

- A. A cost-benefit analysis that includes the costs of recurring licensing and support charges
- B. Estimation of the time that will be needed for each performance test run with the tool
- C. A cost-benefit analysis that includes the costs of evaluating and selecting the correct tool
- D. Mitigation of the risk that the tool will not integrate well with the existing tool landscape
- E. Mitigation of the risk that the vendor's support may become less satisfactory over time

Answer: C,D

Explanation:

The ISTQB syllabus specifies key principles for tool selection:

* Compatibility and integration with the current infrastructure are critical for tool success

* Evaluation and selection costs are a necessary part of cost-benefit analysis Here, B addresses integration risks, which are vital given the existing environment, and E addresses cost considerations related to selection and evaluation, especially crucial when budgets are constrained and open-source tools are considered.
