VMware Cloud Foundation 5.2 Architect Sample Questions (Q87-Q92):

NEW QUESTION # 87

Which two strategies are critical for securing workloads in a VMware Cloud Foundation environment?

(Choose two)

Response:

- A. Enabling vSphere HA for automatic recovery of virtual machines

- B. Encrypting all virtual machines with VMware vSphere encryption
- C. Deploying VMware NSX to configure micro-segmentation for enhanced security
- D. Using a separate storage network to isolate data access from compute

Answer: A,B

NEW QUESTION # 88

When creating a VMware Cloud Foundation physical design for Cloud Operations, which two considerations are essential?
(Choose two)

Response:

- A. Defining the integration points with external monitoring tools
- B. Selecting third-party solutions for network security and firewalls
- C. Designing the monitoring components for network traffic and system logs
- D. Designing the monitoring components for network traffic and system logs

Answer: C,D

NEW QUESTION # 89

Which of the following components should be included in the design to ensure high availability for a VMware Cloud Foundation solution deployed across multiple availability zones?

Response:

- A. Using an external monitoring tool for workload placement
- B. Deploying a fault-tolerant storage solution with multi-pathing
- C. Limiting the number of workloads to reduce network traffic between zones
- D. Configuring vMotion between availability zones to ensure workload migration

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 90

The following requirements were identified in an architecture workshop for a VMware Cloud Foundation (VCF) design project utilizing vSAN for its primary storage solution:

REQ001: Application must maintain a minimum of 1,000 transactions per second (TPS) during business hours excluding disaster recovery (DR) scenarios.

REQ002: Automatic DRS and HA must be utilized.

REQ003: Planned maintenance must be executed outside of business hours.

Which of the following test scenarios should be added and performed to validate these requirements?

- A. Trigger a Virtual Machine vMotion operation.
- B. Trigger a vCenter Server update.
- C. Trigger a failure of an ESXi host.
- D. Trigger a vSAN disk group evacuation.

Answer: C

Explanation:

To validate the stated requirements, the test scenario must address all three: application performance (1,000 TPS), automatic DRS and HA functionality, and maintenance timing (implying minimal disruption during business hours). In a VCF environment with vSAN, test scenarios should simulate real-world conditions that challenge these requirements. Let's evaluate each option:

Option A: Trigger a Virtual Machine vMotion operation. vMotion tests DRS's ability to migrate VMs for load balancing, which aligns with REQ002's "automatic DRS" mandate. It can be scheduled outside business hours (REQ003) to minimize impact. However, it doesn't fully test HA (automatic failover) or ensure 1,000 TPS (REQ001) under failure conditions, as vMotion is a planned operation, not a failure scenario. This is a partial match but not comprehensive.

Option B: Trigger a vCenter Server update. Updating vCenter tests management plane resilience but doesn't directly validate application performance (REQ001), DRS/HA automation (REQ002), or vSAN-specific behavior. While it could relate to maintenance (REQ003), it's unrelated to workload or storage functionality in the VCF design, making it irrelevant here.

Option C: Trigger a vSAN disk group evacuation. Evacuating a vSAN disk group simulates maintenance (REQ003) by moving data to other nodes, testing vSAN's resilience. It may involve DRS for VM migration (REQ002), but it doesn't trigger HA failover. While it could indirectly affect TPS (REQ001), the requirement excludes DR scenarios, and this test doesn't guarantee performance validation during business hours under normal operations or host failure.

Option D: Trigger a failure of an ESXi hostSimulating an ESXi host failure directly tests REQ002: HA automatically restarts VMs on other hosts, and DRS balances the load post-failure. In a vSAN environment, it also validates data availability (vSAN rebuilds objects), ensuring 1,000 TPS (REQ001) is maintained during business hours under failure conditions (excluding DR, as this is a single-host failure within a site). While not a maintenance task (REQ003), it implicitly ensures maintenance-like disruptions (e.g., host failure) don't violate performance, aligning with VCF's HA/DRS automation goals. The VCF 5.2 Administration Guide recommends host failure testing to validate HA and vSAN resilience.

Conclusion: Option D comprehensively validates REQ001 (TPS under failure), REQ002 (automatic DRS and HA), and indirectly supports REQ003 by ensuring business-hour performance during unplanned events, making it the best test scenario. ## NEW QUESTION # 91

What is the primary objective when documenting design decisions in IT architecture?

Response:

- A. To focus on technical implementation without considering business impact.
- B. To track hardware components used in the system design.
- C. To ensure stakeholders understand the business goals.
- D. To define and justify the choices made in the design process.

Answer: D
