NEW QUESTION # 36

A system administrator identifies unusual network traffic from outside the local network. Which of the following is the BEST method for mitigating the threat?

- A. Port blocking
- B. Malware scanning
- C. Packet capturing
- D. Content filtering

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 37

A forensic analyst has been tasked with analyzing disk images with file extensions such as .001, .002, etc. Which of the following disk imaging tools was MOST LIKELY used to create these image files?

- A. ExifTool
- B. SIFT
- C. Encase
- D. FTK
- E. dd

Answer: E

Explanation:

The disk image files with extensions like .001, .002, etc., are typically created using the dd command, which is a popular Unix/Linux tool used for creating bit-by-bit copies of disks. When the output file size exceeds a certain limit, dd can split the image into multiple parts, resulting in files with numbered extensions like .001, .002, etc.

NEW QUESTION # 38

What is the primary purpose of the "information security incident triage and processing function" in the (CSIRT) Computer Security Incident Response Team Services Framework?

- A. To analyze and gain an understanding of a confirmed information security incident.
- B. To accept or receive information about an information security incident, as reported from constituents or third parties.
- C. To initially review, categorize, prioritize, and process a reported information security incident.
- D. To receive and process reports of potential information security incidents from constituents, Information Security Event Management services, or third parties.

Answer: C

Explanation:

The information security incident triage and processing function in the CSIRT framework is responsible for the initial review, categorization, prioritization, and processing of reported security incidents. This ensures that incidents are handled promptly and efficiently, with appropriate resources allocated based on their severity and impact.
