NEW QUESTION # 34

A Jira administrator makes the following changes to User Default Settings:

- * Default sharing for filters and dashboards is set to Public.
- * Autowatch own issues is set to Yes.

Which two statements are definitely true? (Choose two.)

- A. Only newly created dashboards will reflect the new default setting.
- B. Only newly created saved filters will reflect the new default setting.
- C. All users will become watchers of issues they have created in the past.
- D. Saved filters using the old default setting will reflect the new default setting.

Answer: A,B

Explanation:

The changes to User Default Settings affect the default behavior for new filters, dashboards, and issue watching. The two statements that are definitely true are only newly created dashboards will reflect the new default setting (Option A) and only newly created saved filters will reflect the new default setting (Option C), as these settings apply to new creations only.

* Explanation of the Correct Answers:

* Only newly created dashboards will reflect the new default setting (Option A):

* Changing the Default sharing for filters and dashboards to Public in User Default Settings sets the default sharing option for newly created dashboards to Public. Existing dashboards retain their original sharing settings (e.g., Private, Group) and are not affected by the change. Only dashboards created after the setting is updated will default to Public.

* Exact Extract from Documentation:

Manage user default settings

The Default sharing for filters and dashboards setting determines the default sharing option for new filters and dashboards.

To configure:

* Go to Settings > System > User default settings.

* Set Default sharing to Public, Private, or another option. Impact:

* Only newly created filters and dashboards use the new default setting.

* Existing filters and dashboards retain their original sharing settings. Note: Requires Jira administrator permissions. (Source: Atlassian Support Documentation, "Manage user default settings in Jira Cloud")

* Why This Fits: The change to Public sharing applies only to newly created dashboards, making Option A definitely true.

* Only newly created saved filters will reflect the new default setting (Option C):

* Similarly, the Default sharing setting affects the default sharing option for newly created saved filters. Filters created after the change will default to Public, but existing filters keep their original sharing settings (e.g., Private, Group).

* Exact Extract from Documentation:

Manage user default settings

Changing the Default sharing for filters and dashboards to Public applies to new filters and dashboards only.

Impact:

* Existing saved filters are not updated to the new default sharing setting.

* New filters created after the change will default to Public. (Source: Atlassian Support Documentation, "Manage user default settings in Jira Cloud")

* Why This Fits: The change to Public sharing applies only to newly created saved filters, making Option C definitely true.

* Why Other Options Are Incorrect:

* Saved filters using the old default setting will reflect the new default setting (Option B):

* Existing saved filters do not automatically update to the new default sharing setting (Public). They retain their original sharing configuration (e.g., Private, Group) set at creation, so this statement is false.

* Extract from Documentation:

Existing filters and dashboards are unaffected by changes to the Default sharing setting. Only new creations use the updated default. (Source: Atlassian Support Documentation, "Manage user default settings in Jira Cloud")

* All users will become watchers of issues they have created in the past (Option D):

* Setting Autowatch own issues to Yes enables autowatching for issues created after the setting is changed. It does not retroactively add users as watchers to issues they created in the past.

For past issues, users must be manually added as watchers or an automation rule must be created, so this statement is not definitely true.

* Extract from Documentation:

The Autowatch own issues setting applies to issues created after the setting is enabled. It does not affect previously created issues.

* Additional Notes:

* Users can override the default sharing setting when creating filters or dashboards (e.g., choosing Private instead of Public).
