CIPS Commercial Data Management Sample Questions (Q67-Q72):

NEW QUESTION # 67

Henry is the Head of IT at Purple Rain Ltd and is presenting a case to the Senior Leadership Team to ask for more investment in the company's IT strategy. Henry believes the company has an issue with data resilience and is asking for more money to be invested in this. He has completed a Business Impact Assessment (BIA) to better understand what data the company holds. Jon is the Head of Procurement and has listened intently to Henry's presentation. He has decided to go back to his department and complete a thorough risk assessment, as he is aware his team holds a lot of data on suppliers and contracts. The CEO of Purple Rain, Roger Nelson, has asked Henry about next steps in order to protect the company from further risks associated with the IT strategy. Data is currently stored on servers located at Purple Rain's Headquarters. The server room is locked at all times of the day and is only accessible to staff members who have a key. The building itself is extremely secure with CCTV systems located both inside the server room and outside it. However, the server room is prone to overheating. What should Henry's next steps be?

- A. Train all members of staff in the importance of password-protecting their work and the dangers of phishing
- B. Submit a budget request to increase the IT Security budget
- C. Contract a third-party cloud storage provider to manage the data on behalf of Purple Rain Ltd
- D. Complete a Priority Assessment and Recovery Objectives

Answer: D

Explanation:

Given Henry's focus on data resilience, the next logical step is to complete a Priority Assessment and define Recovery Objectives. This will help identify which data and systems are most at risk and require immediate attention in the Data Resilience Plan. (P.105)

NEW QUESTION # 68

Which of the following is an example of a data-enhanced product?

- A. A third-party cloud storage system
- B. An airline that changes the price of flights depending on demand
- C. A fridge that can recommend recipes based on the contents inside it
- D. An air-conditioning unit in a hot warehouse

Answer: C

Explanation:

A data-enhanced product is a physical product that incorporates data-driven functionality to provide additional features. A smart fridge that suggests recipes based on its contents is an example, as it uses data to enhance user experience.

NEW QUESTION # 69

It is important for data to be quality controlled. One important aspect of this is for data to be contemporaneous. What does this mean?

- A. It is up-to-date
- B. The data was recorded at the time it happened
- C. The data is preserved in its original form
- D. It refers to current events

Answer: B

Explanation:

Contemporaneous data means that the information was recorded at the exact time the event occurred. This is critical to avoid errors caused by later memory lapses. For example, a nurse administering medication should record the details immediately to avoid any potential mistakes.

NEW QUESTION # 70

Which of the following approaches to cyber security takes a bottom-up approach to assessing vulnerabilities meticulously item by item?

- A. component approach
- B. system approach
- C. technology approach
- D. elementary approach

Answer: A

Explanation:

This is the component approach - it looks at each individual component (each part of the IT system) in turn to check its okay. When a component is not directly controlled by the organisation (e.g. something to do with a supplier) this is called a dependency. Component approach is a bottom-up approach and is the opposite of the top-down approach which is called the 'system driven approach'. P.179 Domain: 3.2

NEW QUESTION # 71

Which of the following is a UK-specific law that deals with the rights of data, particularly data that is shared and gathered online?

- A. The Privacy Act 2000
- B. GDPR
- C. Information Act 2002
- D. Data Protection Act 2018

Answer: D

Explanation:

The Data Protection Act 2018 is the UK-specific law that governs data protection and incorporates GDPR into UK legislation. GDPR itself is an EU regulation but is included in UK law under this act.
