PMI Agile Certified Practitioner (PMI-ACP)® Sample Questions (Q221-Q226):

NEW QUESTION # 221

Just before a scheduled product launch, the customer declined to accept the final deliverable after seeing the demo. What should the project manager do to prevent this in the future?

- A. Ensure the customer is provided with regular project status updates and that the meeting minutes are well documented.
- B. Ensure the teams are working together daily throughout the product development and are keeping the team's progress up to date.
- C. Ensure there is an environment where team members feel comfortable sharing their ideas, concerns, and feedback.
- D. Ensure the team is able to release new features and updates frequently so that customers can see the product and provide feedback.

Answer: D

Explanation:

To prevent the issue of the customer declining to accept the final deliverable after the demo, the project manager should prioritize frequent releases and feedback loops. By releasing new features or updates frequently, customers have the opportunity to provide feedback earlier in the process, which allows for adjustments to be made during development rather than at the end. This iterative process ensures that the final product better aligns with the customer's expectations and requirements.

NEW QUESTION # 222

Early in a project stakeholder analysis is performed; however, an organizational restructure redefines key roles. What should the project team do?

- A. Obtain a copy of the redefined key roles to update the stakeholder analysis
- B. Use direct engagement and two-way conversation to update the stakeholder analysis for any new stakeholder requirements.
- C. Email a copy of the project vision to those redefined for key roles and ask if they need to be involved in the project
- D. Note the changes to the restructure and roles that affect team activities

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 223

In Agile projects, how are planning outputs shared with stakeholders?

- A. According to the project communications plan
- B. On a need-to-know basis depending on role
- C. Using the most highly visible method possible
- D. Through a series of stakeholder meetings

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 224

A new software development team has just been formed. 5 sprints have passed and the team is now familiar with their way of working. In the 6th sprint, the scrum master notices the team members arguing about the technical design of an upcoming new feature during a backlog refinement meeting. After the refinement meeting, the scrum master notices team members talking about the topic informally and taking sides. There is noticeable tension among the team.

How should the scrum master help the team to resolve the issue?

- A. Decide on the technical implementation that best fits the purpose of the technical design.
- B. Delegate the decision for the best feature implementation to the most senior team member.
- C. Coach the team individually then the whole team during the Sprint review on how to resolve this conflict.
- D. Bring a subject matter expert (SME) from the technology design team to act as a consultant for the team.

Answer: C

Explanation:

As a scrum master, the goal is to foster a collaborative and self-organizing environment. When conflicts arise, it is essential to guide the team in resolving the issue on their own rather than making unilateral decisions.

The scrum master should:

Coach the team individually to understand the root causes of the conflict and ensure each team member feels heard.

Then, bring the team together in a more structured environment, such as the Sprint review, to discuss the disagreement openly and constructively. This helps the team resolve conflicts and learn how to handle similar situations in the future.

NEW QUESTION # 225

A scrum master wants to encourage better collaboration within a collocated team and is coming up with a visualization method for the project. How could the scrum master promote transparency?

- A. Share team progress individually with each top performer every week.
- B. Attach sticky notes for each assignment to the wall in the team's area.
- C. Radiate key information such as the team's work, progress, and velocity at the team's common area.
- D. Consolidate the team's updates in presentation slides and email them to the team regularly.

Answer: C

Explanation:

To promote transparency in an agile environment, the scrum master should ensure that key information about the team's work, progress, and velocity is easily accessible and visible to everyone. Radiating information in a common area, such as a team room or workspace, fosters openness and ensures that all team members and stakeholders can quickly understand the status of the project. This encourages shared understanding and promotes collaborative problem-solving.
