Object Browser is a utility in SQL Workshop that enables developers to browse, create, and edit objects in a database. Some of the actions that you can perform using Object Browser are:

Browse database objects of the current schema. You can view the details of an object by selecting it from the Object Tree and then clicking the different object detail tabs.

Create a lookup table based on a column in the current table. You can use the Create Lookup Table option in the Column Details tab to create a new table that stores the distinct values of the selected column and a foreign key constraint to reference it. You cannot restore dropped database objects, create and run SQL scripts, or export and import SQL scripts using Object Browser.

- A. List
- B. Oracle Text
- C. Standard

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation

Search Configurations is a feature that allows developers to define how end users can search for data in an application. There are three types of search configurations: Standard, List, and Oracle Text. Oracle Text is a search type that provides linguistic and fuzzy search capabilities by using an Oracle Text index on a table column or view column. Linguistic search enables end users to search for data based on language-specific rules and preferences, such as stemming, stopwords, synonyms, etc. Fuzzy search enables end users to search for data based on approximate matches that account for spelling errors, typos, OCR errors, etc. Verified References: [Managing Search Configurations - Oracle Help Center], [Oracle Text User's Guide]

NEW QUESTION # 98

Which three of the following statements are TRUE about Data Synchronization?

- A. Helps in Providing efficient reporting on large data sets coming from a REST service
- B. Data Synchronization enables developers to automatically sync the contents of a local table with the data from a REST service.
- C. APEX can create the local table based on the visible columns in the REST Data Source Data Profile.
- D. You must trigger Data Synchronization manually

Answer: A,B,C

Explanation:

Explanation

Data Synchronization enables developers to automatically sync the contents of a local table with the data from a REST service. APEX invokes the REST service defined in the REST Data Source, downloads all data and synchronizes it to a local table⁶. Data Synchronization has several benefits, such as:

APEX can create the local table based on the visible columns in the REST Data Source Data Profile. Since the table is physically available in the database schema, developers can add indexes, change physical properties, or even add more columns⁶.

Data Synchronization helps in providing efficient reporting on large data sets coming from a REST service. Some REST services can return large amounts of result data that include pagination. If a reporting requirement needs larger data sets, this would lead to multiple HTTP requests and poorer response times. Also, no indexes or other database features can be used to speed up reporting queries. In this case, synchronizing the remote data to a local table and having the reports working on local tables can improve performance and user experience⁶.

Data Synchronization can also collect data from REST services for consumption by PL/SQL packages or other logic. If data from the REST service is replicated to local tables, developers will be able to perform all sorts of processing and also generate different types of reports⁶.

You do not have to trigger Data Synchronization manually, as you can also schedule it to run periodically using a DBMS_SCHEDULER expression⁶.
