HPE Storage Solutions Sample Questions (Q260-Q265):

NEW QUESTION # 260

A large enterprise is experiencing exponential data growth of their existing Oracle databases.

They are concerned about their increasing backup windows and the risk of non-compliance with recovery time objectives increase of data corruption in primary storage. Their primary storage is an 3PAR Storeserv 8400, and their backup target is an HPE StoreOnce System.

Which HPE storage solution allow the customer to migrate this risk?

- A. StoreOnce unified deduplication
- B. Catalyst in-Flight compression
- C. RMC Express protect
- D. 3 PAR remote copy

Answer: C

Explanation:

RMC (Recovery Manager Central) Express Protect is the most suitable HPE storage solution for addressing the customer's concerns about backup windows, recovery time objectives (RTOs), and data corruption risks in their primary storage environment. RMC Express Protect integrates with HPE 3PAR StoreServ and HPE StoreOnce systems, allowing direct backup of Oracle databases from primary storage to the StoreOnce appliance. This reduces backup windows and ensures fast, efficient, and reliable recovery, mitigating the risks associated with data growth and corruption.

NEW QUESTION # 261

A solution architect is sizing the required capacity for an HPE Alletra 9000. Customer requirements include:

- * 200TB base volumes
- * Regular snapshots being taken every hour with one-week retention
- * 10% daily change rate

How much capacity is needed for snapshots after one week?

- A. 480TB
- B. 200TB
- C. 20TB
- D. 140TB

Answer: A

Explanation:

To calculate the required capacity for snapshots after one week for an HPE Alletra 9000 with the given customer requirements:

Base volume size: 200TB

Snapshots frequency: Every hour (24 snapshots per day, 168 per week)

Daily change rate: 10%

The snapshot capacity can be calculated by considering the daily change rate and the number of snapshots over a week.

Daily change: 10% of 200TB = 20TB
Total change over a week: 20TB * 7 days = 140TB
Since there are 168 snapshots (24 per day for 7 days), the total required capacity is 140TB (for the changes) plus the base volume size of 200TB, totaling 480TB.
