NEW QUESTION # 49

A component is considered an IT asset when you want to: (Choose three.)

- A. Track its incurred costs
- B. Manage its procurement
- C. Manage its maintenance contracts
- D. Know its relationships to a business service
- E. Track its operational information

Answer: C,D,E

Explanation:

- * A component is considered an IT asset when you want to perform hardware asset management (HAM) activities on it¹.
- * HAM is a subset of IT asset management (ITAM) that focuses on the physical components of IT systems².
- * HAM helps you to manage the entire lifecycle of your hardware assets, from planning and acquisition to retirement and disposal¹.
- * Some of the HAM activities that require a component to be an IT asset are:
 - * Manage its procurement: This involves creating and fulfilling asset requests, purchase orders, and stock order tasks for the component¹.
 - * Track its incurred costs: This involves tracking the financial information of the component, such as cost, depreciation, budget, and chargeback¹.
 - * Manage its maintenance contracts: This involves managing the vendor, warranty, and contract details of the component, as well as the return merchandise authorization (RMA) processes for products to be returned, replaced, or repaired¹.
- * Therefore, the options that are also HAM activities are A. Manage its procurement, D. Track its incurred costs, and E. Manage its maintenance contracts.
- * The other options that are not HAM activities are:
 - * Know its relationships to a business service: This involves mapping the component to other components and services in the configuration management database (CMDB)². This is a configuration management (CM) activity, not a HAM activity.
 - * Track its operational information: This involves tracking the current status, location, owner, and other attributes of the component that reflect its operational state². This is also a CM activity, not a HAM activity. References:

Any normalization that has occurred on a model can be reverted by using this feature.

- A. Revert Normalization UI Action
- B. Normalizations cannot be reverted
- C. Rollback Normalization Business Rule
- D. Undo Normalization Scheduled Job

Answer: A

Explanation:

Hardware normalization is a process that standardizes the data of hardware and consumable models by using the United Nations Standard Products and Services Code (UNSPSC) and a set of rules¹².

Normalization can be performed manually or automatically on models in the model catalog¹².

If a model has been normalized, it will have a check mark in the Normalized column in the model list¹.

To revert the normalization of a model, you can use the Revert Normalization UI action, which is available on the model form¹³.

The Revert Normalization UI action will restore the original values of the model attributes that were changed by the normalization process¹³.

The Revert Normalization UI action will also clear the Normalized check mark and the Normalization Source field on the model form¹³.
