CompTIA PenTest+ Exam Sample Questions (Q20-Q25):

NEW QUESTION # 20

A security company has been contracted to perform a scoped insider-threat assessment to try to gain access to the human resources server that houses PII and salary data. The penetration testers have been given an internal network starting position. Which of the following actions, if performed, would be ethical within the scope of the assessment?

- A. Gaining access to hosts by injecting malware into the enterprise-wide update server
- B. Leveraging a vulnerability on the internal CA to issue fraudulent client certificates
- C. Exploiting a configuration weakness in the SQL database
- D. Intercepting outbound TLS traffic
- E. Establishing and maintaining persistence on the domain controller

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 21

During an assessment, a penetration tester runs the following command:

```
setspn.exe -Q /

Which of the following attacks is the penetration tester preparing for?

- A. LDAP injection
- B. Dictionary
- C. Kerberoasting
- D. Pass-the-hash

Answer: C

Explanation:

Kerberoasting is an attack that involves requesting service tickets for service accounts from a Kerberos service, extracting the service tickets, and attempting to crack them offline to retrieve the plaintext passwords.

* Understanding Kerberoasting:

* Purpose: To obtain service account passwords by cracking the encrypted service tickets (TGS tickets) offline.

* Service Principal Names (SPNs): SPNs are used in Kerberos authentication to uniquely identify a service instance.

* Command Breakdown:

* setspn.exe -Q /: This command queries all SPNs in the domain.

* Use Case: Identifying accounts with SPNs that can be targeted for Kerberoasting.

* Kerberoasting Steps:

* Identify SPNs: Use setspn.exe to list service accounts with SPNs.

* Request TGS Tickets: Request TGS tickets for the identified SPNs.

* Extract Tickets: Use tools like Mimikatz to extract the service tickets.

* Crack Tickets: Use password cracking tools like Hashcat to crack the extracted tickets offline.

* References from Pentesting Literature:

* Kerberoasting is a well-documented attack method in penetration testing guides, specifically targeting service accounts in Active Directory environments.

* HTB write-ups often detail the use of Kerberoasting for gaining credentials from service accounts.

NEW QUESTION # 22

When planning a penetration-testing effort, clearly expressing the rules surrounding the optimal time of day for test execution is important because:

- A. testing adds to the workload of defensive cyber- and threat-hunting teams.
- B. security compliance regulations or laws may be violated.
- C. testing can make detecting actual APT more challenging.
- D. business and network operations may be impacted.

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 23

A penetration tester gains access to a Windows machine and wants to further enumerate users with native operating system credentials. Which of the following should the tester use?

- A. nbtstat
- B. route
- C. net
- D. whoami

Answer: C

Explanation:

Windows provides built-in utilities for user enumeration and privilege escalation.

* net command (Option C):

* The net command is used to list users, groups, and shares on a Windows system:
net user
net localgroup administrators
net group "Domain Admins" /domain
Useful for gathering privilege escalation targets and understanding user permissions.

NEW QUESTION # 24

During a penetration test, the tester identifies several unused services that are listening on all targeted internal laptops. Which of the following technical controls should the tester recommend to reduce the risk of compromise?

Hostname	Port	Service name	Status
System 1	22	SSH	Open
System 2	80	HTTP	Open
System 3	443	SSL	Open
System 4	3389	RDP	Open

- A. Network segmentation
- B. Patch management
- C. System hardening
- D. Multifactor authentication

Answer: C

Explanation:

When a penetration tester identifies several unused services listening on targeted internal laptops, the most appropriate recommendation to reduce the risk of compromise is system hardening. Here's why:

System Hardening:

Purpose: System hardening involves securing systems by reducing their surface of vulnerability. This includes disabling unnecessary services, applying security patches, and configuring systems securely.

Impact: By disabling unused services, the attack surface is minimized, reducing the risk of these services being exploited by attackers.

Comparison with Other Controls:

Multifactor Authentication (A): While useful for securing authentication, it does not address the issue of unused services running on the system.

Patch Management (B): Important for addressing known vulnerabilities but not specifically related to disabling unused services.

Network Segmentation (D): Helps in containing breaches but does not directly address the issue of unnecessary services.

System hardening is the most direct control for reducing the risk posed by unused services, making it the best recommendation.
