API Risk Based Inspection Professional Sample Questions (Q70-Q75):

NEW QUESTION # 70

In preparing for a future inspection, which of the following assessments can be used to determine what flaws would require repair or replacement?

- A. COF
- B. FFS
- C. POF
- D. RBI

Answer: B

Explanation:

Per Section 13.3 of API 580:

"A Fitness-For-Service (FFS) assessment (e.g., API 579-1/ASME FFS-1) may be performed to determine what size flaws, if found in future inspections, would require repair or equipment replacement." This makes Fitness-For-Service the correct method for evaluating whether existing or predicted flaws are tolerable or require corrective action.

NEW QUESTION # 71

Sec occurs when equipment is exposed to environments

- A. Conducive to certain cracking mechanisms
- B. Unfavorable to certain cracking mechanisms
- C. Unbeneficial to certain cracking mechanisms

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 72

The event may be

- A. Certain or uncertain
- B. Negative or positive
- C. Loss or gain
- D. Singular or multiple

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 73

Risk reduction is typically accomplished using:

- A. equipment history review
- B. changing fluid characteristics
- C. mitigation activities
- D. results of inspection activities
- E. process control

Answer: C

Explanation:

According to API 580, risk reduction is primarily achieved through implementing mitigation activities that are designed to lower either the probability of failure (PoF), the consequence of failure (CoF), or both.

As stated in Section 10.1:

"Risk can be reduced by reducing the likelihood (probability) of failure, the consequence of failure, or both.

This is typically accomplished through mitigation activities such as inspection, process control, or equipment modification." This clearly confirms that "mitigation activities" is the most direct and encompassing method of achieving risk reduction in an RBI program. While the other options (like process control or inspection activities) may be forms of mitigation, they fall under the broader category of mitigation activities and are not the definitive general method.
