NEW QUESTION # 232

The annual loss expectancy (ALE) formula is based on:

- A. Risk and mitigation
- B. Impact and loss
- C. Impact and frequency
- D. Frequency and risk

Answer: C

Explanation:

Annual Loss Expectancy (ALE) is calculated as:

$ALE = \text{Single Loss Expectancy (SLE)} \times \text{Annual Rate of Occurrence (ARO)}$, which reflects the impact (SLE) and the frequency (ARO) of an event. This formula is a key component in risk assessment for determining expected financial loss.

A, B, and C are partially correct but not the accepted risk formula framework.

NEW QUESTION # 235

Which of the following is best for reducing the number of nuisance alarms?

- A. Having security guards patrol after hours
- B. Examining janitorial programs and ensuring that cleaning is done only during the day
- C. Conducting frequent door inspections and promptly replacing faulty components
- D. Placing signage on the inside of doors

Answer: C

Explanation:

Nuisance alarms, particularly from doors, are often caused by mechanical failures such as worn hinges, faulty magnetic switches, or misaligned contacts. Regular inspections and maintenance are the most effective way to reduce false alarms.

Signage (A) helps inform but doesn't fix the mechanical issue.

Patrols (C) are reactive, not preventative.

Janitorial scheduling (D) can reduce traffic but doesn't address faulty hardware.

NEW QUESTION # 236

The distance between a vehicle bomb and the target is called the:

- A. Clear zone
- B. Impact area
- C. Blast radius
- D. Standoff distance

Answer: D

Explanation:

Standoff distance refers to the space maintained between a potential explosive threat (such as a vehicle-borne improvised explosive device, or VBIED) and the target asset. Increasing standoff distance significantly reduces the impact of a blast by leveraging the inverse-square law, which governs blast pressure dissipation over distance.

A (Blast radius) is the area affected by an explosion.

B (Impact area) refers to where a blast or projectile strikes.

C (Clear zone) is used in security but does not specifically refer to bomb offset.
