You are validating a JWT and want to be sure you use the correct public key.
What do you need to check?

- A. The issuer of the public key is the same as the issuer in the JWT header.
- B. The public key hash is the same as the signature hash of the JWT.
- C. The keyID of the public key is the same as the keyID in the JWT header.
- D. The expiration time of the JWT lies within the expiration time defined in the public key.

Answer: C

Explanation:
When validating a JSON Web Token (JWT), it is essential to ensure that you are using the correct public key.
The best way to do this is to check that the keyID (kid) of the public key matches the keyID (kid) specified in the JWT header.
* Option A: Incorrect. The public key hash and the signature hash of the JWT are not directly compared.
Instead, the public key is used to verify the JWT's signature.
* Option B: Incorrect. The expiration time of the JWT is validated separately and does not determine which public key to use.
* Option C: Incorrect. While the issuer (iss) claim in the JWT header identifies the entity that issued the token, it does not specify which public key to use for validation.
* Option D: Correct. The keyID (kid) in the JWT header identifies the specific public key that should be used to validate the token.
Matching the kid ensures the correct public key is used.
