NEW QUESTION # 47

What occurs when an existing table is extended in ServiceNow?

- A. The parent table's Access Controls are ignored when determining access to the new table's records and fields
- B. The new table inherits the functionality built into the parent table

- C. The new table does not inherit any of the fields from the parent table
- D. You must script and configure all required behaviors

Answer: B

Explanation:

In ServiceNow, extending a table means creating a new table (child class) that inherits properties from an existing table (parent class). This inheritance includes fields, business logic, and other configurations, allowing for efficient reuse and customization.

Key Points:

- * Field Inheritance: The child table inherits all fields from the parent table. For example, if you extend the Task table, your new table will include fields like "short_description" and "priority."
- * Business Logic Inheritance: The child table also inherits business rules, client scripts, and other logic defined on the parent table, ensuring consistent behavior across related tables.
- * Access Controls: Access controls are not ignored; instead, the child table inherits the parent table's access controls. However, you can define additional access controls specific to the child table as needed.
- * Customization: While the child table inherits many properties, you can add new fields, scripts, and behaviors to tailor it to specific requirements without affecting the parent table.

Which of the following statements is true about Guided Application Creator?

- A. A scope application user role is automatically created
- B. The welcome screen appears every time a new application is created
- C. Default access controls are automatically created
- D. The global scope option is turned on by default

Answer: B

Explanation:

The welcome screen appears every time a new application is created through the Guided Application Creator. The welcome screen provides an overview of the steps involved in creating an application, such as defining the app name, scope, and tables, configuring the app user interface, and publishing the app. The other options are not true about the Guided Application Creator. The global scope option is turned off by default, as it is recommended to create applications in their own scope for better security and performance. A scope application user role is not automatically created, as the user can choose to create one or use an existing role for the app access control. Default access controls are not automatically created, as the user can define the read, write, create, and delete permissions for each table in the app. Reference: Guided App Creator
