* Diversification: Spreads investments across multiple securities, industries, or asset classes to reduce exposure to a single security or sector.

* Other Options:

* Use of Leverage: Increases, not decreases, portfolio risk.

- C. Exchange-traded note (ETN)
- D. Certificate of deposit (CD)

Answer: B

Explanation:

Equity securities represent ownership in a company, and preferred stock is a type of equity security that pays dividends and has priority over common stock in liquidation.

* A is correct because preferred stock is an equity security.

* B is incorrect because commercial paper is a short-term debt security.

* C is incorrect because certificates of deposit (CDs) are fixed-income banking products.

* D is incorrect because exchange-traded notes (ETNs) are unsecured debt securities.

- A. They are issued by the U.S. government with a high amount of default risk.
- B. They are liquid.
- C. They are FDIC-insured.
- D. They are callable.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Treasury securities are among the most liquid investments, as they are backed by the U.S. government and trade actively in large volumes.

* A is correct because Treasuries are highly liquid, making them easy to buy and sell.

* B is incorrect because most Treasury securities are not callable.

* C is incorrect because FDIC insurance applies to bank deposits, not Treasuries.

* D is incorrect because U.S. government securities have negligible default risk.

When the index level and strike price of a listed index option are the same, the option is:

- A. At the money.
- B. Trading at intrinsic value only.

- D. In the money.

Answer: A

Explanation:

An option is considered "at the money" when the current price of the underlying asset (or index level) equals the option's strike price.

* B is correct because the index level equals the strike price.

* A is incorrect because "in the money" requires the option to have intrinsic value (e.g., for a call, the index level must be above the strike price).

* C is incorrect because "out of the money" applies when the index level is below the strike price (for calls) or above it (for puts).
