What are the types of splits in a multi-development environment stack?

- A. Product-based and release-based splits
- B. Scoped-app and global configuration splits
- C. Timeline and project-based splits
- D. Geographic and functional splits

Answer: A

Explanation:

In a multi-development environment stack in ServiceNow, the types of splits commonly refer to how development efforts are organized and managed across different environments.

* Product-based splits:

* Development efforts are divided based on specific products or modules. For instance, one team may work on ITSM while another works on ITOM.

* Release-based splits:

* Development is split by different release versions. Teams may work on different versions of the same product for testing, updates, or new features.

These splits help manage concurrent development efforts efficiently, especially in environments with multiple teams and priorities.

- B. The security compliance percentage of the ServiceNow instance.
- C. The number of security incidents created in the last 24 hours.
- D. Percentage of vulnerabilities remediated in the last 24 hours.

Answer: B

Explanation:

The ServiceNow Security Center's daily compliance score represents the security compliance percentage of the ServiceNow instance. It provides an overall measure of how well your instance adheres to defined security policies and best practices.

The score is calculated based on various factors, including:

Vulnerability Management: The number of identified vulnerabilities and their severity.

Configuration Compliance: How well the instance configuration aligns with security standards.

- A. Assessing network and system communication needs
- B. Estimating the projected integration data metrics
- C. Determining the color scheme for integration UI
- D. Planning the communication for the integration go-live

Answer: A

Explanation:

In the final planning stage of a ServiceNow integration, the CTA should prioritize assessing network and system communication needs. This involves:

Connectivity: Verifying network connectivity between ServiceNow and the external system. This includes checking firewalls, ports, and any required network configurations.

Protocols: Determining the communication protocols to be used (e.g., REST, SOAP, JDBC).

Security: Ensuring secure communication channels, including authentication and encryption requirements.

Performance: Considering bandwidth requirements and potential performance impacts on both systems.

Why not the other options?

B: Determining the color scheme for integration UI: While UI considerations are important, they are not the primary focus during the technical details gathering stage.
C: Planning the communication for the integration go-live: Communication planning is important but separate from the technical details of the integration itself.
D: Estimating the projected integration data metrics: Data volume estimates are useful, but the primary focus is on ensuring successful communication between the systems.
