Avaya IP Office™ Platform Implement Certified Exam Sample Questions (Q73-Q78):

NEW QUESTION # 73

On the IP Office platform, which two features are supported by the embedded voicemail?

- A. Auto Attendant
- B. Voicemail to Email
- C. Call Recording
- D. Hunt Group Announcements

Answer: A,D

Explanation:

Embedded Voicemail is a basic voicemail solution integrated into the IP Office control unit (e.g., IP500 V2) without requiring a separate server. It supports Option A, "Auto Attendant," which allows callers to navigate menus (e.g., "Press 1 for Sales"), and Option B, "Hunt Group Announcements," which provides greetings or queue messages for hunt groups. Option C, "Call Recording," is not supported by Embedded Voicemail; it requires Voicemail Pro or a separate recording solution. Option D, "Voicemail to Email," is also exclusive to Voicemail Pro, which integrates with email servers, unlike Embedded Voicemail. References: Avaya IP Office Embedded Voicemail User Guide.

NEW QUESTION # 74

Which User Profile is required on IP Office for a user to enable Avaya Equinox mobile client (Android or iOS)?

- A. Remote Worker
- B. Teleworker
- C. Basic
- D. Power User

Answer: D

Explanation:

Avaya Equinox is a unified communications client for mobile and desktop devices, offering features like softphone calling, IM, and presence. To use Equinox on a mobile device with IP Office, a user requires the "Power User" profile (Option B). This profile includes licenses for advanced mobility features, such as softphone functionality and integration with Equinox, allowing seamless access to IP Office features remotely. Option A (Teleworker) is for remote deskphone users, Option C (Basic) provides minimal features, and Option D (Remote Worker) is specific to certain remote configurations, none of which fully support Equinox without additional licensing. References: Avaya IP Office Equinox Solution Guide, User Profile Licensing Guide.

NEW QUESTION # 75

Which feature provides automatic call distribution to a group of users?

- A. Voicemail Pro
- B. Call Pickup
- C. Hunt Groups
- D. Short Codes

Answer: C

Explanation:

Hunt Groups (Option A) distribute incoming calls to a defined group of users based on rules (e.g., sequential, rotary). Option B (Call Pickup) answers others' calls, Option C (Short Codes) is for dialing, and Option D (Voicemail Pro) is for voicemail, not call distribution. NEW QUESTION # 76

Which component is required to enable resilience in a Server Edition deployment?

- A. Secondary Server
- B. Application Server
- C. Voicemail Pro Server
- D. Expansion System

Answer: A

Explanation:

Resilience in Server Edition ensures continuity of service if the Primary Server fails. Option A, "Secondary Server," is the required component, acting as a failover system that takes over call processing and management if the Primary Server becomes unavailable. This setup is a key feature of Server Edition's high-availability design. Option B (Expansion System) adds capacity but does not provide resilience. Option C (Voicemail Pro Server) enhances voicemail but isn't tied to core resilience. Option D (Application Server) supports additional applications (e.g., one-X Portal) but isn't required for failover. References: Avaya IP Office Server Edition Resilience Configuration Guide.

NEW QUESTION # 77

What is the maximum number of simultaneous calls supported by a single BRI trunk on IP Office?

- A. 0
- B. 1
- C. 2
- D. 3

Answer: B

Explanation:

A single BRI trunk (Basic Rate Interface) supports 2 simultaneous calls (Option A), as it provides 2 B-channels per line. Options B, C, and D reflect higher capacities (e.g., multiple BRI or PRI). References: Avaya IP Office Trunk Configuration Guide.
