NCARB ARE 5.0 Project Development and Documentation Exam Sample Questions (Q73-Q78):

NEW QUESTION # 73

Which of the following siding types should only be applied vertically?

- A. Plain bevel
- B. Board and batten
- C. V-shiplap
- D. V-groove tongue and groove

Answer: B

Explanation:

Board and batten is a vertical siding system: wide vertical boards with narrow battens covering the joints; its detailing, drainage, and expansion behavior are intended for vertical application only.

By contrast, plain bevel (lap) siding is typically horizontal; V-shiplap and V-groove T&G can be detailed either direction depending on manufacturer, but are commonly horizontal on walls.

NEW QUESTION # 74

Material	Unit	Cost	Quantity	Total
Architectural Precast Panels	SF	$ 35.00	5500	$ 192,500.00
Alumuninum Storefront Windows	SF	$ 55.00	1200	$ 66,000.00
Prefinished Metal Sill Flashing	LF	$ 10.00	120	$ 1,200.00
Sealant	LF	$ 2.00	480	$ 960.00

Refer to the exhibit.

An architect reviews the construction manager's construction estimate for a typical precast wall system with aluminum storefront windows.

Click on the component in the axonometric detail that is missing from the system estimate.

Answer:

Explanation:

Explanation:

1. Reviewing the Construction Estimate

The listed components are:

- * Architectural Precast Panels - exterior cladding
- * Aluminum Storefront Windows - glazing system
- * Prefinished Metal Sill Flashing - weatherproofing at sill
- * Sealant - for joints between components

No line item appears for thermal insulation.

2. Identifying the Missing Element in the Axonometric Detail

Looking at the drawing:

- * The detail shows precast concrete panel cladding outside.
- * A storefront frame and glazing in the opening.
- * There is a hatched layer behind the precast in the stud cavity area - this represents continuous insulation.
- * The insulation is a required component for the wall to meet energy code R-value/U-factor requirements (per IECC or ASHRAE 90.1).

3. Why This is Critical

- * Insulation is essential for thermal performance, occupant comfort, and energy efficiency.
- * Omitting it from the estimate could cause:
 - * Noncompliance with code.
 - * Incomplete cost budgeting.
 - * Change orders during construction.
- * In ARE 5.0 PDD, architects must check that all components of an assembly are represented in the cost estimate.

4. References

- * NCARB ARE 5.0 Handbook - PDD Content Area 3: Integration of Building Materials & Systems
- * Architectural Graphic Standards - Precast wall sections with insulation
- * Building Construction Illustrated (Ching) - Continuous insulation in wall assemblies
- * Energy Code References: IECC Table C402.1.3 for minimum continuous insulation requirements in exterior walls

NEW QUESTION # 75

A construction detail for a window sill shows metal flashing terminating behind the exterior cladding. Which principle is being demonstrated?

- A. Thermal bridging
- B. Structural redundancy
- C. Air barrier continuity
- D. Water management

Answer: D

Explanation:

Proper flashing is critical for water shedding and moisture protection. Flashing behind the cladding allows water to drain outward-addressing ARE Objective 3.3: Evaluate construction details for moisture control.

NEW QUESTION # 76

During CD phase, the architect notices plumbing lines clash with roof trusses. What should the architect do first?

- A. Add soffits to conceal pipes
- B. Consult with the plumbing engineer
- C. Notify the contractor
- D. Revise the truss design

Answer: B

Explanation:

Coordination is essential in PDD. When a clash arises, the architect must consult with the responsible consultant (plumbing engineer). This supports Objective 3.1: Coordinate consultant drawings.

NEW QUESTION # 77

Fire and smoke control requirements for air ducts include which of the following? Check the three that apply.

- A. Smoke damper
- B. Fire damper
- C. Balancing damper
- D. Variable-volume smoke controls
- E. Smoke barrier
- F. Air-handler shut-down sensors

Answer: A,B,F

Explanation:

HVAC duct penetrations through fire/smoke rated assemblies require listed dampers and control/sensing to limit spread of flame and smoke.

Fire dampers (D) close on heat to maintain the fire-resistance rating of penetrated assemblies.

Smoke dampers (A) limit smoke migration in smoke partitions/barriers and in smoke control systems.

Air-handler shut-down sensors (F) (e.g., duct smoke detectors interfaced with the FA system) stop fans to prevent smoke distribution.

Not required: Balancing dampers (B) (for airflow only); Smoke barrier (C) (a wall/assembly requirement, not a duct device);

Variable-volume smoke controls (E) (project-specific engineering, not a base requirement).

PDD refs: IBC Ch. 7 & 9; IMC §§607 (dampers) & 606 (smoke detection in ducts); ARE 5.0 PDD-MEP/fire protection integration.
